FELL SIX STOREYS.

Fireman's Fall Broken By Network of Clothes Lines.

New York, April 1.—A network of clothes lines in the rear of the tenement house at 1365 Fifth avenue saved the life of Fireman William J. Riley, when he fell from the sixth storey of the building today. The thin lines snapped under him but retarded the speed of his fall, so that he escaped with a probable fracture of the shoulder and possible internal injuries.

Riley was standing on a ladder dropped from the roof above, opposite the window on the top floor. Another fireman stood above him, while others were below on the ladder, ventilating the smoke-filled building which was on fire. Riley leaned over to fix one of the rungs of the ladder, when he lost his balance and toppled over. He shouted, and as he rushed past them his fellow firefighters grasped at him, trying to stop his fall.

None of them was successful, however, and he was slowed up only when he struck the clothes lines. He was taken to the Harlem Hospital, where it was said he would recover.

Demands on Government From Many Places

All Departments Say Estimates Cut to Limit — Budget Will Tell the Tale of Whence Money Is to Come.

(Special to The Times.)

Ottawa, April 1.—As the few apostles of retrenchment and economy in the government fly desperately from point to point to find new places where these old virtues may be exercised, they meet such stout resistance at every point that they are realising more and more every day that "the downward path is easy."

It is made apparent to them that they must not begin cheese-paring at St. John, N. B., where there was acute congestion this winter through lack of terminals, railway facilities and where the extension of the Negro Point breakwater is said by the western members who visited the port a few weeks ago to be absolutely necessary.

Ontario members would have something to say if there was any talk of stopping the Welland canal work; the cost of the parliament buildings construction in the future cannot safely be lessened and the public works estimates are already pared down as closely as possible.

In the west, the government intends to do railroad construction only where absolutely necessary to follow lines already begun, but the western members say that the Hudson Bay railroad must be included and that the west will not be put off any longer. They almost "hold a gun" to the government's head, so much in earnest are they.

Out at the Pacific coast no one would hear of the stopping of the subsidy to have the Coughlin company construct a dry dock, and there and all over the dominion where shipbuilding companies are there is strenuous objection to the government programme of ships being reduced. They also want bounties "until the industry is established."

There is the navy, which the government is keeping small. Every department swears it has presented the minimum of its requirements. What can a poor government do? The answer will come when the budget comes down. It will raise more revenue if it can.
