was made for his body on the tide flats but to no avail. A freight steamer sailed that night from near the draw bridge and many believe that Emery Danforth stowed himself away on board her. No crime has so aroused peaceful Belfast as this in many years.

Woman's Desperate Battle for Life

The attempted murder at Frankfort, which is in the same county, was also characterized with brutal fiendishness. Mrs. John Lowe was on her way to visit her mother's house, which is not far distant from her own. As she passed the home of James Kelley he was standing in the doorway and called her. She responded, and entered the door. What took place will not be known until his victim recovers from her terrible injuries and is able to give an account of it. That she was forced to put up a desperate struggle for her life is certain.

The whole neighborhood was aroused with the screams of the unfortunate woman and a half a dozen men ran to the Kelley house, where they were forced to break down the door. On a bed near the door they found Mrs. Lowe lying unconscious with two huge razor gashes in her throat, blood covering everything. One gash severed the smaller jugular vein, and was the most dangerous. The other extended across her throat and chin, seven inches in length.

Kelley was hanging from one of the rafters with a rope about his neck. He was cut down before he had harmed himself a great deal, and it was only the counsel of the older men in the crowd that saved him from lynching.

Mrs. Lowe has been friendly to the aged man, who has been drinking heavily lately, according to report, and went unresistingly in answer to his call. Kelley will be tried at the next criminal term of court for Waldo county.

May Clear Up Old Murder.

Another chapter in the famous Mattie Hackett case, one of Maine's most noted murders, came to light this week, which has a clue to the apprehension of the real murderer of Mattie Hackett in the little town of Readfield back in 1905. Elsie Raymond, of the same town, was tried on the charge of murdering the Hackett girl last fall, seven years after the crime was committed, but was acquitted by the jury.

Last week Richard Dunbar, who was sentenced in Kings county, New York, to one year in the penitentiary told a story to the detective who brought him east from Cheyenne (Wyo.) which may go a long ways towards clearing up the unsolved mystery of the Hackett murder.

Dunbar told the detective that the murderer of Mattie Hackett was a prosperous manufacturer, whose scheme was to waylay and abduct the girl. He had hired, according to the story, a number of tramps to assist him, and when the girl resisted the advances of the murderer she had been killed.

Dunbar claimed he was present when the murder took place, but did not actually participate in it. Since the trial of Mrs. Raymond he said that the matter had been preying upon his conscience and he wanted to tell of it. What developments will result from the story, which as yet unauthenticated in any of its important particulars, cannot be stated at this time.

Murderer Pleads Guilty.

There was a pitiful scene in the supreme court for Somerset county in Skowhegan, Saturday, when Michael Shannon, of South Boston, who has been on trial for the murder of John H. Blackwell, colored, of Lewiston, which occurred at Shawmut last January, retracted his plea of not guilty and pleaded guilty. The trial had been in progress all one day when counsel for the respondent announced that Shannon was ready to retract, and asked the court that the case be reduced to manslaughter. Shannon is 57 years of age and the maximum sentence of twenty years for manslaughter means virtually a life sentence for him, his counsel explained.

Shannon pleaded guilty and then broke down and wept audibly. He was remanded to jail for his sentence and was led from the court room to the jail to await the sentence in a weakened condition.

Moncton, N. B., March 28—Moncton's two principal streets, Main and St. George, may soon be lighted by natural gas if the gas company falls in line with a proposition of the city council to substitute gas for electricity. At city council meeting tonight a committee consisting of Ald. Robinson, Tingley, Forbes was appointed to interview the gas company and generally to investigate the cost and feasibility of changing from electricity to gas. The idea is to have a constant demonstration of natural gas for the benefit of visitors, as well as being more conomical.

Four Scott act cases were before Police Magistrate Steeves today and counsel for the defence in some of the cases took exception to the jurisdiction of the magistrate, on the ground that recent legislation provided for an increase of salary for the magistrate at the option of the city council and therefore he was interested in having a larger revenue from fines and liable to influence in giving decisions. The cases, with one exception, were adjourned, the point raised by counsel being simply noted. The American House, R. Hebert and Mary Dobson were the three parties charged.

The property of A. E. Trites, at the corner of Main and Highfield streets, one of the finest residential sites in the city, has been sold to a St. John syndicate. There is a rumor that the property, which is near the depot, will be utilized for a new hotel. The property was formerly the Oliver Jones residence.

BORDER TOWNS

St. Stephen, N. B., March 26—Easter day with its bright sunshine and mild weather was ideal and in consequence the churches were filled with worshippers at every service. At Christ church Holy Communion was celebrated at 8 o'clock in the morning. At 11 o'clock morning prayer, sermon by the rector, Ven. Archdeacon Newnham; Sunday school service at 2.30 o'clock and evening prayer at 7 o'clock. The chancel of the church was beautifully adorned with flowers, Easter lilies and carnations, and a beautiful cross of Easter lilies, presented by Mrs. George W. Daniel, were on the reredos. The white altar cloth and pulpit and lectern banners were used and the handsome church was in festal array. The singing and anthem was particularly good and the congregation large at all the services. At Trinity church there was early communion at 8 o'clock, morning prayer at 11 o'clock and evening prayer at 7 o'clock. The singing was excellent. The floral decorations in the chancel were Easter lilies. The attendance was large at each service and the pastor, Rev. Craig Nichols, preached two eloquent sermons appropriate to the Easter season. The Presbyterian, Methodist and Baptist churches were prettily adorned with flowers and were filled with large and attentive congregations. The Church of the Holy Rosary was filled with devout worshippers at every service, which were conducted by Rev. Father Lavery. The special singing in this church was unusually good and the floral decorations very beautiful.

On Tuesday afternoon Mrs. Joseph McVay gave a very delightful bridge at her handsome home on Rushton street. There were five tables and the prize was won by Mrs. George Curran. There were some very pretty gowns. Mrs. McVay wore a rich dress of black satin with trimmings of cream lace. At 6 o'clock a dainty tea was served.

Much pleasure is anticipated from the Golf Club bridge which is to be given in Red Men's Hall on Friday evening. The invitations have been out for the past ten days, and much time has been given in the arrangements by the ladies, who are interested, and it is expected to be the most brilliant function enjoyed on the St. Croix for many months.
