

Courtesy American Forestry Association.

The most perplexing of all forest fires is one that starts in an old cutting where debris is heavily piled. Our photograph shows such a fire, against which even the best organized fire protection service is sometimes helpless to make headway.