

to monies that were received by the local organizations throughout the country, and the necessity for supplying overseas units with goods as well as entertaining the men of the various camps, was entered on along broad lines and with uniform success. Much assistance was given to the military authorities in recruiting, largely through the theatres on Sundays, which were used through the generosity of the theatrical profession both as a financial and enlisting agency to aid recruiting and finance the necessities of the soldiers.

GEORGE WRIGHT,
Trustee S.P.A.