

THE WAR LORDS. (Library Edition.) By A. G. GARDINER. Demy 8vo. 7s. 6d. net. With 16 Portraits by CLIVE GARDINER, reproduced in Lithography.

Mr. A. G. Gardiner's new book, "The War Lords," was issued in THE WAYFARERS' LIBRARY in July 1915, and owing to its very great success it is thought that a larger and revised edition would be as cordially welcomed. Mr. A. G. Gardiner has therefore revised it and added fresh matter, including a chapter on LORD KITCHENER.

Truth.—"The book contains a score of brilliant studies of the outstanding personalities of the war which were well worthy of publication in this handsome and more permanent form."

THE WAR THOUGHTS OF AN OPTIMIST.

By BENJAMIN APTHORP GOULD. Cr. 8vo. 2s. 6d. net.

"The War Thoughts of an Optimist" is a collection of timely articles on the war by Benjamin A. Gould, an American citizen who has been resident for several years in Canada.

Outlook.—"Mr. Gould's book is so exceptional for an American, even though he be now in fact domiciled on Canadian soil, that it is worth more than a passing glance. He sees beneath the immediate surface of things; and his understanding of world affairs and the fight which the British Empire is making for justice, not only to its own peoples, but for those of all civilisation, is in effect, though not in intention, an indictment of his own country's callous and sordid abandonment of unhappy Belgium. . . . We heartily commend this unassuming little book, which is small enough to escape general attention in these times when it might almost seem in many directions that the moral weight of any work is appraised by its weight avoirdupois."

CARTOONS ON THE WAR. By BOARDMAN

ROBINSON. Cr. 4to. 3s. 6d. net.

These drawings by Boardman Robinson, a noted American artist, are selections from cartoons published for the most part in the New York Tribune and Harper's Weekly. They represent the emotions evoked by the news from day to day.

Everyman.—"They strike home with a vigour and a sardonic humour that are wonderfully effective."

New Age.—"The drawings have a lyrical and spontaneous quality. They have not the stale and moribund classicism of the English Cartoon. Evidently lithographs, the quickness and unpremeditation of their execution are justified by dramatic results."
