About Rural Law

to have their fruit trees extend out over their neighbor's land. Such a right may be acquired after twenty years uninterrupted user, but it would only be the right to keep the trees in the same position as they had occupied for the full period of twenty years, and would not cover the further extension of the branches beyond the distance they extended at the beginning of the twenty years. Unless such a right has been acquired by long user, as above pointed out, your neighbor can insist on the limbs being trimmed off, even with the line between your land and his land, and if you do not keep them so trimmed he can cut them off even with the division line and remove the overhanging branches.

Law Simplified

In the columns of this issue is an advertisement for "Angers Digest of Canadian Laws." This little book touches upon practically all differences that may arise between man and man, and gives the law relating to them in a most concise and intelligible manner. Every person would do well to provide himself with one of these books.
