CANADA HOUSE,

CHATHAM, N. B.
CONSIDERABLE outlay has been made on this house to make it a first class hotel, and travellers will find it a desirable temporary residence both as regards location and comfort. It is situated within two minutes walk of steamboat landing. The proprietor returns thanks to the public for the encouragement given him in the past, and will endeavor by courtesy and attention to merit the same in the future.
Good Stabling on the Premises.
May 18th, 1875.

"Wilbur House,"

Bathurst, Gloucester County, N. B.
This House, which has been enlarged and thoroughly repaired and painted and refurnished, will be open to the public on Monday next, 12th June.

As regards situation, it is located in a very pleasant town, and being in close proximity to the Bathurst and Gloucester County Railway, it is a most desirable place for tourists and families who leave the city to seek the invigorating air of the North. The County excels in beautiful scenery and excellent game grounds. The hotel is within easy reach of the Intercolonial Railway, and every effort will be made by the proprietor to secure the comfort and pleasure of all who may patronize the establishment, which will be conducted in the very best style.

ROYAL HOTEL,

KING SQUARE.
I HAVE much pleasure in informing my numerous friends and the public generally, that I have leased the Hotel formerly known as the "CONTINENTAL," and thoroughly renovated the same, making it, as the "ROYAL," always had the reputation of being, one of the best Hotels in the Province.

Excellent Bill of Fare, First-class Wines, Liquors and Cigars, and superior accommodation. Backhall's Livery Stable attached.
THOS. F. RAYMOND.
St. John, July 9, 1877.

NORTHERN HOUSE,

CAMPBELLTON.
THE SUBSCRIBER having recently bought and fitted up the John McMillan Property, is now prepared to accommodate Boarders both private and transient on the most liberal terms.

The commanding view which this House affords of the splendid Restigouche river and adjacent mountains, renders it one of the most attractive Hotels in the North.

R. DAWSON,

PROPRIETOR.
July 1st, 1877.

VICTORIA HOTEL,

RIVER DU LOUP,
JOSEPH A. POUNTAIN, PROPRIETOR.

THIS HOUSE is situated in the immediate vicinity of the Railway Station, and is well calculated to meet the requirements of travellers, as neither pains or expense have been spared to secure the comfort of guests. Situated on a splendid site, overlooking a splendid view of the St. Lawrence and adjacent country.

To Mill Owners and Mechanics.

THOS. B. PEACE,
MANUFACTURER OF

ALL KINDS OF SAWS,

Is prepared to fill orders from any part of the country. His saws are now being widely used, are made of the very finest quality English Steel, and are warranted to be equal to the best English or American manufacture. A fair trial will prove the correctness of these statements.

A Tender Memory.
A little footstep pattering on the floor,
A golden head laid gently on my knee;
A shadow darkening all the earth and sky,
And life is said and desolate to me.

Sweet lips have parted in a peaceful smile;
The light of God upon that baby brow;
A hush upon the tiny waxen face—
Our darling's but a tender memory now.

Our grief might seem, we try to calmly think,
To ask ourselves half sternly—Is it right
That we should mourn that to eternal rest
Her infant form was laid by us to-night?

In later years her footsteps might have turned Aside from paths that point the heavenly gate;
Perchance she might have heard the awful words;
"You cannot enter now—too late—too late."

And now! Ah, yes! our darling calmly sleeps!
Earth holds no further hope, nor grief, nor loss.
Another life has gained the pardon won
With such deep pain upon the bitter cross.
—Chambers' Journal.

The Voice Within.
A voice to me calling—calling!
And what does it say through the shine?
"Oh, life is so vain, with its endless refrain Or 'That which hath been is what cometh again,'"
Till death puts the wretched "in-ine."

A voice to me calling—calling!
And what does it say through the gloom?
"Oh, life is so sweet at the dear Lord's feet,
In the light of His smile it is sequence complete,
And a door into glory, the tomb."— —Churchman.

THAT TEN DOLLARS.
It was odd, very odd, reckon it up this way or that way, or in whatever way I might, the result was that I could account for it. I went over the whole quarter's receipts again to see if something had not been omitted, but everything was quite right. "Halloa! what's this? It looks like a scratching out; and yet it can't be, for I never use a penknife." So I held the leaf up to the light and scanned it closely and then, turning it over, scrutinized it again. "It certainly does look very much like an erasure; but no, it's only a little roughness on the surface of the paper." I was completely puzzled.

It was quite possible for me to have too little; but to have ten dollars too much—I could not understand that at all. "Well," I said to myself, "it's better, any rate, than having ten dollars too little." Still, the idea of there being a mistake somewhere made me feel very uncomfortable.

I had been very busy preparing my accounts in order to present them to my employers in the morning, for the morning was a quarter-day, and I knew that in nothing could a clerk afford so much as by being wrong in his balance. So I thought a little and then determined to consult Jackson our managing clerk. I was young at the time—not more than twenty; and having been in the establishment only a few months, I knew but little of his character. He was exceedingly attentive to business; but there were some vague floating rumors going the round of the place, which accredited him with anything but a steady life.
But he had always been very civil, and even kind, to me; and so, in my dilemma, I sought his advice. He went over my accounts with me, but could detect nothing wrong.

"Well, Watson," he said, "you are on the right side now, and if you take my advice, you will keep there. Just pocket the money and say nothing about it."

Seeing that I demurred he continued:
"Of course you can do as you please; but I know this much, if you were ten dollars short, you would have to make it up in quick time."

I was again about to make my objections to this mode of procedure, when I was cut short by a salesman, who came to say that Mr. Jackson was wanted in the sale room. As he strided away, Jackson turned round and said:
"I'll see you about it again, Watson."

In the meantime you need not mention it to any one.

I saw no more of him till my labors were done for the day, and I was reaching my hat down from its peg, when he tapped me over the shoulder.

"One word, Watson, before you go; if ever it should be found out where the mistake lies, I will make it all right for you. Good night."

That night the ten dollars were ever before me.

The last thing I remembered before falling asleep was thinking of the ten dollars. I slept and dreamed of ten dollars. In the morning, whilst at breakfast, I laid the whole affair before my mother, and asked her counsel.

"Give up the money, of course."
"But you see, mother, I am afraid it would offend Jackson, he seems so much to wish me to hush it up."

"Never mind Jackson; do what is right, and I am sure it will be better for you in the end. Tell Mr. Elliott," —the head partner—"How it is, and I am certain he won't be angry."

I ate the remainder of my meal in silence; for whilst I did not wish to make an enemy of Jackson, who could, if he pleased, make my situation very unpleasant, I had strong compunc-tions about keeping the money.— Breakfast was over, and I was leaving home, my mother took hold of my hand and said:
"Promise me, Harry, before you go, that you will give up the money."
I hesitated.

"Surely, Harry, you would not steal? Steal? Never!" and I promised at once.

Jackson found no time to speak to me that morning, being engaged with Mr. Elliott; but when, in turn, I entered the private office, I saw him cast an enquiring glance towards me.

"This seems all right, Watson," said Mr. Elliott, after looking over my account. "Have you anything else?"

"Yes, sir; I have still ten dollars, of which I am unable to give any account."

"Strange! Are you sure that you have missed nothing?"

"Quite sir; I have been over everything several times, and last night Mr.
Jackson was kind enough to assist me."

"It's strange; but you can put the money back into your safe. I dare say it will be found out before the next quarter is up. And by the way, Watson, I intend to raise your salary.— Holloway is going to leave, and I wish you to take his place."

I thanked him, and heartily, too; for a hundred dollars a year was no small increase at our house.

"Let me see. I think, Jackson, he had better go to-morrow."

"Yes, sir; it will be most convenient."

"You hear, Watson. I believe there's nothing more. Good morning."

There was joy in our house that night, and on the morning I went forth with a light heart to take possession of Holloway's stool.

And now, dear reader, just take a jump over the next three years. Jackson was still in his place; but I had risen step by step, until I occupied a post inferior only to that held by himself. The mystery attached to my ten dollars had never been unraveled and they still reposed peacefully in my safe. Jackson and I got on very well together; but there was one thing which I could not understand. For a few nights before quarter-day, Jackson always under some pretence or other, took the books home with him; but as I did not consider it my place to interfere I said nothing.

It was the quarter-day at the end of the three years of which I have spoken, and I was assisting Mr. Elliott in examining the account of one of the junior clerks, whose ledger exhibited a glaring deficiency of one hundred and fifty dollars. The youth was not the brightest in the world, and for a time he seemed stunned. But he was sure it must be some mistake of mine; his cash was all right three days ago;
and he took the book to see for himself. The result was the same—deficit one hundred and fifty dollars. Again he went over it, and I could see the big drops of sweat roll down his face as he again came to the same horrible conclusion—deficit, one hundred and fifty dollars. A third time he essayed to reconcile the difference; but suddenly stopped short, he turned to Mr.
Elliott and cried:
"These are not my figures, sir."

"Then whose are they?"

"I don't know sir; they are not mine; look sir, something has been scratched out here."

"Umph! So there has. Has the ledger ever been out of your care?"

"No, sir—that is, yes, twice."

"When?"

"Last night and the night before."
"Who had it?"
"Mr. Jackson."
"Then call Mr. Jackson up here," he came.

"Mr. Jackson," said Mr. Elliott,
"there's an error in Brown's account; something appears to have been scratched out; and as I understand you have had his ledger the last two nights, I thought perhaps you could explain it."

Jackson turned deadly pale, and, bending down to hide the ghastly hue of his countenance, he pretended to examine the figures.

"Yes; there had been an erasure; but could explain it. He had a private memorandum in his desk; he would fetch it."

Ten minutes went by, but Jackson did not return.

"Watson," said Mr. Elliott, "will you go and say that I shall be pleased if Mr. Jackson will come here immediately?"

I went, but could not find him.

"Osborne," I asked of a porter,
"have you seen Mr. Jackson?"

"Yes, sir; he went out about ten minutes ago."

"Went out?"

"Yes, sir; he came down stairs looking very white, and taking his hat, he said he felt rather ill and he would get a little air."

I went back and told Mr. Elliott.

"O!" was all he uttered; and then turning on his heel, he motioned for us to follow. He first went to Osborne, who repeated his story again;

and then he crossed to Jackson's desk which was locked. A smith was sent for, and the lock forced.

"Mr. Watson," said Mr. Elliott, taking out Mr. Jackson's books—he had never called me Mr. Watson before—"will you come to my private room? I shall want you for a few minutes."

That few minutes expanded into hours; and the discovery of embezzlement by Jackson, to the extent of some thousand dollars, was the result of our labors. These funds extended over several years; and by a curious coincidence the very first of them was connected with my ten dollars—the last, of course, with Brown's hundred and fifty. Need I say that Jackson was never heard of again?

That night I walked home as the managing clerk of Elliott & Co., and never since have I forgotten the lesson taught me by my ten dollars.—Mun-ro's Parlor Readings.
