MISCELLANEOUS.

Mr. Fogg.—Why aren't you in school, Bobby?

Bobbie.—Cause I read in the history-book that great an' successful men usually started in life without many educational advantages, an' I'm more ambitious than the other boys.

Minard's Liniment cures Diphtheria.

A countryman walking along the streets found his progress stopped by a barricade of wood.

"What's this for?" said he to a person standing by.

"Oh, that's to stop the fever from spreading," replied the other, by way of being jocose.

"Ah," said the countryman, "I've often heard of the Board of Health but I never saw it afore."

The following note was recently received by a Higginville (Kan.) school-teacher: "Respected Miss: please excuse Willie for absents. He fell down stairs just before school time and we feared his internal injuries was hurt at first, but they ain't. The doctor says that no part of his anatomy was hurt but the brewing of the epydermis of the outside hide

"Have you taken everything you need, Jim?" asked the mother of James Delaney Atherton, aged twelve, who was about to start for a week's trip. "You'd better let me look at your bag."

"Everything's in it," said the boy, in a fever to be off. "Every single thing I need."

"Brush and comb?" queried the mother.

"Brush and comb!" cried James Delaney Atherton, indignantly. "Why, mother Atherton, I thought I was going on a vacation!"

Minard's Liniment relieves neuralgia.

"Mamma, didn't you say last week you wanted the carrying knife and the chopper sharpened?"

Mrs. Suburb.—Indeed I did. Bless his little heart! How thoughtful you are! They are both so blunt as to be useless.

"Well, I'll take 'em round to the cutter's for you."

"How sweet of you to do such things for your mamma, my little cherub. I'll wrap them up."

"No, don't wrap them up. I want them to show. There's a boy out there waiting to lick me, but I fancy when he sees me coming he'll go home."

In a church, as the story goes, there was introduced a new hymn last Sunday, and, after the close of the services, the organ blower found his way to the player's bench and asked in a meek voice: "How did the music for the new hymn go this evening?"

"Oh, very well, very well, indeed," replied the organist; "but why do you ask?"

"Well, said the blower, "I'll tell you the truth. I was a bit nervous and a bit worried about it, for, you see," he went on explaining, "I never bl'w for that hymnbefore."

Items of Catholic Interest.

The Pope, it is said, has notified directly to the Sultan his accession to the Pontifical throne, and not, as was the custom in past centuries, through the medium of the French Embassy.

The reception into the Church of Rev. Robert Hugh Benson, M.A., son of the late Archbishop of Canterbury, which has already been referred to in these columns, took place at Woodchester, Rev. H. Reginald Buckler, O. P., officiating. Mr. Benson was an active member of the Anglican "Order of the Resurrection."

Another conversion noted by English journals is that of Rev. S. W. A. Williams, until recently curate of St. Clement's Nottingham, W., who was received into the Church at the Oratory of the Sacred Heart, Bournemouth, by Father Redman, S. J.

Mgr. Andrian, Archbishop of Marseilles, has sent M. Combes a protest against the suspension of his salary. He claims that the President's action is not only a violation of the Church's right of speech, but a violation of the articles of the Concordat as well.

The first Swiss Catholic congress has just taken place at Lucerne. The object of the organizers is not to deal with any Catholic grievances for in Switzerland Catholics and Protestants are quite on a footing of equality, but to organize their strength and make it more effectually in public life.

Archbishop Farley has created a new office in the New York Archdiocese, that of director of the diocesan convents, with the powers and privileges of a vicar general. Mgr. John Edwards, rector of the Church of the Immaculate Conception, was elevated to this place.

The movement to erect a statue to Mgr. Nugent in Liverpool continues to receive a steady flow of public sympathy and support, subscriptions coming in from people of all creeds. Already the committee has in hand the sum of £1,390, about £290 more will be needed, and this amount is certain to be forthcoming. On the pedestal of the statue it is intended to have three plates commemorative of Father Nugent's labors on behalf of the homeless and suffering poor.

Rev. Father Henry of St. Patrick's Church, Cincinnati, contemplates the establishment in his parish of a St. Vincent de Paul Society whose members shall be women. This will be a radical departure from the accepted order; but the plan was originated and found efficacious in Venice under Cardinal-Bishop Sarto now Pius X., and Father Henry thinks it may succeed equally well on American soil.

If Roman reports speak truly, one at least of the best portraits which are being painted of his Holiness is destined to be his gift to royalty. Thus Herr Lippay's first portrait of Pius X., which is to be of life size, is, it is believed, destined for the Czar, who is to be the first potentate to visit Rome after the conclave. Herr Lippay is a noted Hungarian painter who has his studio at Vienna. He was called to Rome by the Pope, who had known him at Venice. His Holiness gave him seven sittings. Before returning to Vienna he received a signed photograph of the Pope, with a dedication, for himself and a cameo for his wife. He is now working on the sketches at Vienna, and he will return to Rome during the present month with the portrait completed.

An important work dedicated to Pius X. will see the light in a few days. Fifteen years ago Mgr. Joseph Wilpert began his studies of the pictures of the Catacombs, and the results of his labors are now embodied in a handsome volume, "La Pitture delle Catacombe Romane," with over three hundred illustrations. Some of these have already been reproduced in German magazines, but the greater number are still unknown. Most of them are phototype and polychrome reproductions from the original, so that the student is at last enabled to examine scientifically the different stages of early Christian art and its bearing on many dogmas of Catholic faith. Mgr. Wilpert's work may be said to crown the labors of De Rossi, Marucchi and other archaeologists who have devoted their lives to the study of the Catacombs.

Four Sisters of St. Benedict have been employed as teachers in the public school at Arlington, Ill. They were persuaded to seek employment there by a Protestant lady, Mrs. Anna Norris Kendall, the wealthiest woman in Bureau county and an active leader in educational movements. They attended the teachers' institute in August and asked for positions. Superintendent Claude Brown was in doubt concerning his duty in the matter and applied to the State Superintendent of Education, Mr. Baylis, in Springfield, who says that he is without authority to prevent the Sisters from teaching. About ninety-five per cent. of the patrons of the school are members of the Catholic Church and previous to the employment of the nuns the teachers were of this religious faith.

Rev. Patrick J. Grant, Irishman by birth, American by naturalization, Paulist, priest by profession, once man of the world, of travel and many accomplishments, thirty-five years of age, striking in appearance, a reformer by nature, has instituted a persistent antivice crusade in the "New Tendency," says the "New York Sun." Folks up that way call him the "Fighting Priest." Father Grant says the vow to clean out the wholesale immorality in the Paulist parish was not an impetuous resolve, but grew upon him gradually as pitiful stories of wrong came to his ear.

Quite a good deal of comment has appeared in the daily press lately relative to the selection of a coadjutor for the Archdiocese of Boston, says the "Republic" of that city. Some of the papers have gone so far as to say that Bishop Harkins has been selected, but there is no foundation for this report. The most that can be said at this time is that it has been definitely settled that Archbishop Williams' health is such that a coadjutor is to be appointed at once. While the general health of the Archbishop is fair, his sight is very poor, and it does not seem to show any improvement. There is little question that Bishop Harkins will be the first choice of this gathering. Under the rules, however, three names must be selected, and it is presumed that the names sent to Rome will go in this order: Bishop Harkins, of Providence; Bishop Brady, of Boston, and Bishop O'Connell, of Portland. The final selection, of course, is made in Rome, and while it does not follow that the first name will be selected, it is believed that Bishop Harkins, if he will take the place, will receive the endorsement of our Holy Father. Bishop O'Connell's age (Bishop Harkins and Bishop Brady both being about sixty) is very much in his favor, and it may develop that Bishop Harkins and Bishop Brady will both prefer that Bishop O'Connell take up this work.

Much interest has been aroused among Newark, N. J., firemen over the proposition made by Rev. James J. McKeever that he would hereafter award a gold medal to any member of the department who saved a life at a fire. He said he would bear the expense himself as long as his purse held out and after that would call on his friends. Father McKeever broached the plan at the funeral of Fireman William F. Boland, of Engine Company No. 11, who met his death in responding to an alarm of fire. The combination chemical wagon was overturned and Boland's skull was fractured which injury resulted fatally. Charlotte Wells was burned to death in the fire to which Boland and his comrades were hurrying. During the celebration of the High Mass at Boland's funeral Father McKeever took occasion to say that the work of the fireman was not as well recognized on the part of the public as it should be. Boland's death was mourned in every home in the city, he said, because a fireman has a place in the hearts of every man, woman, and child. The fireman belongs to every home, the pastor declared, as he was essentially the protector of the home from an enemy worse than the soldier enemy to one's country. I think it will not be out of place to state here," continued Father McKeever, "that it would be a good plan to provide something whereby firemen would be publicly commended in their work of saving lives. With that end in view and with the cooperation of the chief and fire commissioners, I hereby offer a gold medal to any fireman that saves a life at a fire. If my own purse will not stand the drain I will see if some of my friends will not help me out."

At Creighton University Omaha, on Sep. 31 was celebrated the fifty-first anniversary of the entrance of Rev. Charles Coppens into the Society of Jesus. The day was appropriately celebrated with solemn services at St. John's (college) Church in the morning, followed by a reception in the university hall and by a social gathering at the college in the evening.

Father Coppens, born in Tournhout, Belgium, May 24 1835, entered the Society of Jesus at Trochuennes, Belgium, September 21, 1853. Arriving in America the same year, he entered St. Stanislaus Seminary, a normal college for young Jesuits, at Florissant, Mo. In 1865 he was ordained to the priesthood in St. Patrick's Cathedral, New York. Father Coppens' career is remarkable for the fact that he has passed these fifty years in the interests of education, devoting his time entirely to study and the classroom. Besides contributing frequently to magazines and periodicals, Father Coppens is the author of the following books: "An Introduction to English Rhetoric," "Orationes Composition," "Logic and Metaphysics," "Moral Philosophy," "Moral Principles and Medical Practice," "A Systematic Study of the Catholic Religion."

Itching Skin

Distress by day and night—That's the complaint of those who are so unfortunate as to be afflicted with Eczema or Salt Rheum—and outward applications do not cure. They can't. The source of the trouble is in the blood—make that pure and this scaling, burning, itching skin disease will disappear. "I was taken with an itching on my arms which proved very disagreeable. I concluded it was salt rheum and bought a bottle of Hood's Sarsaparilla. In two days after I began taking it I felt better and it was not long before I was cured. Have never had any skin disease since." Mrs. E. E. Ward, Cove Point, Md.

Private cablegrams from Rome announce that the appointments of an auxiliary Bishop of New York an Archbishop for the see of Milwaukee, to succeed the late Most Rev. Frederick X. Kizer, and a bishop of Columbus, to succeed the Most Rev. Henry Moeller, appointed coadjutor of Cincinnati, have been postponed till November 1.

Notwithstanding the increase of tuition fees, there was no perceptible falling off in the attendance at the opening of the sixth scholastic year of the University of Notre Dame, Ind. Over 600 students are enrolled, including those from the extreme East, Western and Southern States. The late reporting for work. An extra year has been added to work in the preparatory department. This has raised the requirements for admission to all the college courses. The faculty remains the same as last year, excepting four new instructors who have been assigned to the preparatory department Notre Dame now offers to students fourteen complete courses of study all leading to degrees. It is one of the most advanced and best equipped educational institutions in the country.

New York papers announce that a certain house which was once reputed to be the most luxuriously appointed abode of vice in the metropolis has now been turned into a home for poor unemployed Catholic girls. Since Sept. 1 the house has been in the possession of a little group of Franciscan Tertiaries, with Sister Francis at their head, who previously had the home at 109 and 111 on the same street. The name under which the building is to serve its new purpose is, appropriately, the House of the Transfiguration.

We read that at a recent meeting of Protestant religious workers in Boston examples of the need of religious education were cited. To a man eighty years old, on his dying bed, it was that Jesus Christ was dead. "Father" Osborne of the Society of St. John the Evangelist, West End, told of recently meeting a girl seventeen years old who had never heard of Jesus Christ or Adam and Eve; and the same minister recently ran across a business man who was not acquainted with the name Judas Iscariot. We very much doubt it is in the city of Manila there could be found among the "benighted Filipinos" three such instances. Yet our non-Catholic friends send missionaries to the Filipinos!—S. H. R. view.
