MARSHALLING AMERICA'S RESOURCES.

WASHINGTON, To-day.

The direction of America's vast commercial resources in the common struggle against Germany formed the basis of the second formal conference between American officials and the British mission held to-day at Secretary of State Lansing's office at the State Department. Two general subjects were taken up: How best and most economically to marshal those resources for the aid of the Allies. How most certainly further to restrict all products getting through to aid the enemy. While no definite decisions were reached the conference went over such problems as trading with the enemy, export restrictions, rationing Holland and Scandinavia, the means of arriving at accurate statistics to show how much of the different lines the Allies need and how much this country can supply. The United States has begun to point out to the Allies some of its own great necessities in certain trade lines for which this country was entirely dependent on them up to the time the United States entered the war. Many products could be imported here only if there were surplus at the point of production, over the needs of the Allies, also on condition that agreements be signed that the products be not allowed to fall into the hands of the enemy. Balfour to-day received a deputation of Irish-Americans who laid their views before him and called attention to the favorable impression that a solution of the Irish situation would have on this country. Balfour said that while he had no power to speak for the Government he could say that everything possible was being done to bring Ulster, the Redmonites and the Sein Fein elements together, and that the British Parliament stood ready to agree to any solution which the Irish themselves found acceptable. He promised to report the meeting fully to his Government.

SITUATION EASIER IN RUSSIA.

PETROGRAD, To-day.

Following an all-night joint secret session of the Ministers of the Government and the Council of Workmen and Soldiers' Deputies at the Marinsky Palace, the Council announced to-day that another mass meeting would be held to-night, at which the result of the conference would be announced. Their constituents at the meeting expected the future attitude of the Council towards the temporary Government would be determined. The appearance of Cabinet Ministers, Miliukoff, Shingareff, and Nekrasoff, and their addresses from the steps of the Palace to the assembled crowd at midnight in which they explained the meaning of the recent note, appeared to have the effect of abating the antagonism of the rank and file of the populace, who during the afternoon marched with banners demanding the resignation of Foreign Minister Miliukoff. The words of the ministers were warmly cheered at times and there was at most no unkindliness in evidence. Most of the troops have declared themselves ready to support and defend the temporary Government. The Petrograd garrison as a whole stands with the Government.

ARTILLERY DUELS ON WEST FRONT.

From Staff Correspondent with the British Armies in France (via London).

Infantry attacks and counter attacks having subsided for the time being, there came from the battle front to-night only the dull roar of the never-ending artillery duel. There was still fighting all through last night and early to-day as the Germans throw heavy reserves into the counter attacks, which cost them dearly. These counter attacks succeeded only in the neighborhood of Chery, where the British troops fell back from the more advanced posts occupied early yesterday. The new British line on the war maps has the appearance of a jigsaw puzzle and really reflects the severity of the fighting which has surged back and forth during the last 48 hours. There are various "pockets" in the front that remains to be cleared out, and the artillery to-day was paying particular attention to them. The guns also made life very unpleasant for the German inhabitants of Oppy Wood. The Canadians have resisted all attempts to drive them from their newly-won positions at Fresnoy. Further south the British troops which penetrated another section of the Hindenburg line were holding tight their gains. New German units constantly are being identified among the prisoners. Meantime the German artillery is making targets of the villages wrested from them in the past two weeks. Gavrelle, Bailleul, Arleux, Fresnoy and Monchy being ground to powder by thousands of high explosive shells, in accordance with the German custom of strafing every place from which they are driven. The scene of the fighting has become more visible since the British took so much high ground during the first phase of the battle of Arras. It is possible now to look far over Doullens, From Viny Ridge and the height about Monchy the war spreads out below in a great panoramic picture. The recent activity of the German artillery has lent far more color to the scene. The entire battle zone seems at times to be canopied by flying shells; the barrage curtains set up here and there appear in the distance like immense artists' patens damped with splashes of red, brown, white, black, gray and pink. There is real artistry in a well placed barrage, and under such an one the British infantrymen advance with a sureness born of ever-increasing confidence in the efficiency of their guns. It is possible from the heights to look upon pretty little villages far back of the shell fire area and to see cities like Doullens, Cambrai and even Lille. One cannot but wonder what will be their fate as the occupying Germans break loose from their nearly three years' grip on this industrial and wealthy section of France. From the high ground it is possible nowadays to see also another phase of the war, the devotion to duty of the Red Cross stretcher-bearers. They can be seen from time to time emerging from the smoke of the firing line, carrying the wounded back to the first aid stations. They can be seen depositing their stretchers and without a moment's hesitation go trudging back into the very thick of the battle with shells bursting all around them. They are not immune, these non-combatants, for shells have a distinctly impersonal way of killing most of those with whom they come in contact. In the last few days' fighting the Associated Press correspondent has seen stretcher-bearers fall under fire. They seem to have a valour all their own. They have none of the excitement of the actual fighting and must go coolly about their duty with death ever near them. They grow remarkably indifferent to their fate. There is never a word of command needed to keep them to their tasks.

market which is causing wild fluctuations in prices may result in Government action to protect dealers and the public. This corner has been unintentionally brought about by agents of the British wheat commissions, who have made unusually large purchases of the contract grades of wheat. There is not sufficient contract wheat available to fill the orders placed by British buyers and dealers have been caught short. They now seek to be relieved from their contracts promising to deliver all available contract grades and to make up the balance out of lower grades at a price based on their milling value. Grain men state that number four grade is almost as good for milling purposes as number three, and if the British commission will accept delivery of number four they can carry out their contracts. Sir Thomas White told Parliament yesterday that the Winnipeg corner was causing artificial inflation in the price both of wheat and flour and that he had cabled Sir Geo. Perley to take the matter up with the British Wheat Commission and to insist on action being taken at once to relieve the situation.

FORCING THE CHANCELLOR'S HAND.

LONDON, To-day.

The Exchange Telegraph Co.'s Amsterdam correspondent wires that according to travellers from Germany popular discontent because of the Government's silence concerning Germany's war aims is forcing the German Imperial Chancellor soon to make a definite statement of policy. The Chancellor, it is stated, has been discussing the question with Emperor William and Talaat Pasha, Premier of Turkey, while Count George von Hertling, Bavarian Prime Minister, has discussed the matter with the Austrian-Hungarian Cabinet at Vienna. The Chancellor, it is added, is now awaiting a complete agreement before delivering his promised speech to the Reichstag.

UNREST IN RUSSIA.

PETROGRAD, To-day.

A clash between rival parties has occurred in Nevsky Prospect, in which a number of shots were fired. An officer and a girl are reported killed and several wounded. The city is in a turmoil of excitement. A series of demonstrations developed during the afternoon both for and against the Government. Motor trucks crowded with soldiers and civilians traversed the streets in support of the Provisional authorities. Detachments from both camps are appearing in increasing numbers and the agitation is increasing in intensity. The Council of Workmen and Soldiers' Deputies have accepted the Government's explanation of its May Day note by a vote of 34 to 19 and has decided that the incident is closed. An anti-government demonstration was completely swamped by gigantic pro-government demonstrations. Friday evening there were some clashes but no serious incidents.

CHINA'S EARLY ENTRY INTO WAR INEVITABLE.

PEKIN, To-day.

The entry of China into the war at an early date seems inevitable. Prince Li Yuan Hung and the Senate are opposed to such a step, but the House of Representatives, the Premier and the Conference of Military Governors are urging war. The dissolution of Parliament is threatened if Parliament fails to declare a state of hostilities. Owing to the great power exercised by the military party, the Senate probably will yield to the war party. Hon. Shih Ying, Minister of Communications, has resigned.

Patriotic Concert at Brookfield.

The good people of Brookfield have long been noted for their liberality, and for the many excellent entertainments which from time they have held in aid of some worthy cause. And so it was on Wednesday evening last that a fine programme was presented before a full house. The concert was under the direction of Mrs. Edward Lester and Mrs. Andrew Glendinning, and they were loyally assisted by their friends and neighbors around. The total receipts went above the hundred dollar mark, and out of this amount a cot is to be presented to the Soldiers' Home at Waterford Hall, and to be known as the Brookfield Cot. The balance of the receipts will be donated to some equally patriotic fund. We congratulate the good ladies upon their success.

Boys Meet Accident.

While playing on a gallery near the residence of Mr. McKelley, Springfield, two boys named Hunter and Duffy met with an accident. The railing of the gallery gave way and the boys fell to the ground, a height of twelve feet. Hunter escaped practically unhurt, but Duffy, the son of Mr. M. E. Duffy, was not so fortunate and was badly injured about the body. He is now confined to his home under the care of Dr. Anderson.

Another Medical Man Charged

Nicholas Carcen, a fisherman of Point Lance, who was arrested two days ago for being drunk, told the police that when he came to town he visited the surgery of Dr. McDonald and got a prescription for three bottles of liquor, which he procured from the public dispensary and drank to excess. In consequence the medical man was summoned last evening on a charge of violating the Prohibition law. The case is set down for Tuesday next.

The New Tactics.

(From the New York Post.)

In the fighting in France, and particularly on the British front, a new tactical method is emerging. Instead of a hurricane assault dying down after a few days into the old trench-grubbing and quiescence, we have the attack in waves at comparatively short intervals as measured by the previous rate of progress in trench warfare. Just two weeks after the British assault north of Arras, we have the announcement of a new attack on a wide front, with initial gains of a mile and a half north of the Scarpe, as measured from Bailleul to Gavrelle, and a mile south of the river from Wancourt to Guemappe. Still further to the south the occupation of Tressaint measures a similar advance in a few days. These new tactics consist in not trying to squeeze the last ounce of profit out of the first assault, with resultant exhaustion, but in a pause, the bringing up of artillery and a renewed attack. Part of the plan is the alternating attack conducted by the British and French. When Haig stopped to take breath after the conquest of Vimy, the battle of the Aisne began. Now that Nivelle is slowing down Haig begins.

If the hot bath at night promoted wakefulness, it had better be taken in the day, but it can be taken without this effect, then all the better, for in this case it will be still another aid toward sleep. But remember always, that the atonic requires warm water, and as soap is tonic in its effect on the skin, don't be afraid to use it. So remember, that in order to be a wakeful beauty one must also be a sleeping beauty.

Turn the garden hose on garden shrubs once a week in summer and insects will not get a good start. A bathroom rod put up near the kitchen range will be a handy place to dry dish towels in stormy weather.
