Kanananananananananananan CHAPTER I.

"A lady to see Monsieur La Fort." Monsieur La Fort, proprietor of a thriving lace manufactory on Rue St. Honore, Brussels, looked up from his desk of ebony inlaid with pearl, as the door to his luxurious office swung open, and the boy made the above announcement, and then stood aside for young girl to pass in. Monsieur saw, with a slight start of surprise, the loveliest face in the world—a face that flushed slightly as he bent his earnest, curious gaze up-on it; and the least haughty uplifting of the small, shapely head, with its bright, waving brown hair, warned him that though the lady was both young and unattended, a circumstance which he did not fail to observe, she did not lack spirit or independence to carry her through an interview with him, or, indeed, with anyone, however imposing his appearance or surroundings might be. The lace manufacturer's first expression had been one of annoyance at the interruption, for he had been busily engaged considering an important order; but his brow involuntarily relaxed as he met those brown eyes looking so gravely and calmly into his; as he marked the sweet mouth, around whose delicate lips, as a maple leaf after its first frost-kiss, there played the least tremulousness of anxiety; as he noted the white, graceful throat, with its knot of rale pink fastening the neat collar, and which lent a tinge of color to the round, smooth cheeks; the straight, slender figure in its closely fitting garments of dark cloth, and the small shapely hands, with their neatly fitting gloves, that matched her dress with characteristic French exactness. The gallant Frenchman arose with ala rity from his velvet chair, came forward with a bow such as only a Frenchman knows how to make. "How can I serve made iselle? he asked, politely.

"Monsieur has need of he in his lace factory—I seek employment." was the onse, in clear, sweet and soit, with no mark or stain of tones, while the tint deepened upon ware round and smeeth and nink like the maiden's cheek, as she pointed to an advertisement in the paper which she carried in her hand.

"Mon Dieu! I was sure she was some aristocrat come to give an ormonsieur mentally ejaculated, while his sauve bearing underwent a sudden change.

The smile faded from his face, and though the look of admiration did not die out of his eyes, as they still rested on the girl's beautiful countenance, yet the pompous manner with which e received her application plainly indicatol that there was a vast difference in his estimation between one suing for a favor and one giving an order for his expensive laces.

"Um! yes, we need help; but we wish only experienced help. Do you understand lace-making?" monsieur responded, with a doubtful glance at her daintily-gloved hands.

'I have made lace since childhood. Will monsieur examine some of my work?" and the girl extended her wrist, around which was gathered a ruffle of soft fine lace of a graceful, delicate pattern.

Monsieur La Fort reached out his white hand and took hers, ostensibly to examine the pretty trifle, but with a brought the rich blood surging into the fair face before him. She drew back from him with a haughty gesture.

"Perhaps monsieur can examine this more to his satisfaction," she said, drawing from one of her pockets a bewitching little handkerchief edged

The manufacturer's white teeth gleamed in a smile that was a triffe sinister at the act, but he took the dainty fabric and examined the edge

It was very fine and a lovely pat-'Did you make this?" he asked in of surprise, and bending a searching glance upon her. "Yes, monsieur," was the brief and

But he read, written in a delicate flowing hand, the name, "Netina Flo-"A pretty name for a pretty maid," soliloquized monsieur, as his eyes traveled from that bit of pasteboard to the sweet face before him, and then back while he turned the question whether to engage her or not over in his mind

I can now explain everything satisfactorily. Tina."
"Tina! Ah, that is sweeter yet!" he thought, and again his eyes sought the beautiful face opposite him.

He was startled at the change he saw there. The young girl had grown suddenly white as a snowdrift, while her brown eyes were fixed with a frightened look upon the words he had just been read-

"Pardon, monsieur," she said, in trembling tones, as she reached out her hand and took the card from him.
"I was not aware that anything was

With one quick glance she took in the simple words, and heaved a sigh of relief as she saw the apparently insignificant sentence penciled there. But Monsier La Fort had made note of her emotion; it told him that she had something to conceal.

"There is a mystery here." he thought; "this pretty one, with the manner of a queen, with her lovely face, her pure French and cultivated language, is not what she would appear. It is a puzzle that I must solve. "You are Mademoiselle Florienz, then," he said, and referring with a look to her card again.

She bowed assent. "Your residence?" he questioned. "At present in Brussels."

Monsieur La Fort smiled at her reply. It told him nothing.
"Your lace is very fine, the threads are very evenly laid," he continued, after a moment's thought, and returning her handkerchief, which, noticed, emitted a faint odor of helio-"We need help, as I have said, but it must be experienced help. Will you come into the work room, show me how well you can handle the bobbins? One of our women is absent, and I will test your ability at her pillow."

Mademoiselle Florienz bowed assent, while a little smile of amusement twinkled in her eyes and dimpled the corners of her mouth. She was conscious of her ability to perform, and there was no reluctance in her manner as he asked her to prove what she could do.

She drew off her gloves preparatory to accompanying the manufacturer to the work room, and that quick-sighted individual remarked that her hands were dainty as a queen's-white and soft, with no mark or stain of were round and smooth and pink like the heart of a sea shell.

"At this moment the door opened again, and in darted a small, shriveled, queer-looking creature, like a gust of wind from some northern mountain. was old and wrinkled, sunburned and freckled, as if she was accustomed to being out in all kinds of wether, while she was clad in the plainest and oldest-fashioned garments imaginable.

She did not see Mademoiselle Florienz at first, but dashed up to Monsier La Fort, and said in shrill and rapid tones:

Well, you told me not to come again for a week, but the work's done, and I cannot be idle; I must have more," and she unfolded several meters of coarse lace from a napkin as she spoke

'Ah, madam, you will flood the market, if you work at this rate," monsieur responded, making a wry face as he examined her work. "Who cares, so that the poor fools who like such trumpery get it, and I have my money for making it?" she answered, sharply, while her keen eyes watched him narrowly, as he measured off the lace meter by meter. "But you will break me, madam, at this rate. I shall not have money enough to pay you," laughed her employer, who evidently enjoyed chaffing

"Never fear." she retorted, "there is no danger of 'breaking' a man who loves gold as you love it." Monsieur colored at this shaft, but retaliated: "Do not talk to me about loving gold? Why, Madame Beza, your own coffers must be overflowing by this 'How do you know " she demanded, employment, like yourself, madam," she replied, respectfully, while her eyes rested kindly upon the unattractive face confronting her. Madame Beza's look softened; then she came closer, and peered curiously into the young girl's countenance. [To be Confinued.]

Progress of the Six Day Bike Race in New York.

The Gans-McGovern "Go"-Shooting Tournament at Ailsa Craig.

WHEEL.

THE SIX-DAY RACE. New York, Dec. 11.-There were nine stanters in the six-day bicycle race at Madison Square Garden this morning at 8 o'clock, after a record-breaking 24 hours, in which one champion had been forced to quit, and a number of other riders had been raced off their wheels. The terrific pace set by the three leading teams was still maintained, and there was a crowd present all through the early morning hours cheering the riders. There were numerous changes among the leading teams early in the morning, and the fast clip set by each failed to make special gain for any of them, except a few laps gained on the tail-enders, Muller and his partner. Mc-Farland crossed the 600-mile mark at 4:40 this morning, being miles ahead of the record for that time. Twenty minutes later the team score, with that of two other leaders was 605 miles and 6 laps. This was 11 miles and 2 laps ahead of the record made by Miller and Waller in the Garden last year. A few minutes before 7 o'clock the men set-tied down to a 15-mile an hour pace, and lagged along at this for some time.

The riders began the forenoon hours with a wholesale fall. When the men and wheels had been sorted out of the mix-up it was found that Pierce, of the Canadian team, was badly, cut about the legs, most of the riders were more or less bruised, and two of the wheels were wrecked. The referee decided to attach no blame for the accident, and the lost laps were restored to all the riders. The 650th mile was finished at 7:53 o'clock, Archie Mc-Elachern leading. The time is 27 minutes better than that made last year. The score at 11 o'clock was as fol-Elkes and McFarland, Simar and Gougouttz, Pierce and McEachern, 715 miles 4 laps; Turville and Gimm, Waller and Stinson, 715 miles Babcock and Aaronson, 715 miles; Fisher and Frederick, 714 miles

New York, Dec. 11.-With the 1,000 mark but a score of miles ahead of them, nine of the six-day bicycle riders in Madison Square Garden at midnight were keeping up the hurricane pace set for them at midnight on Sunday. This was the beginning of the 49th hour, or the third day of ontest, and Elkes and McFarland and Pierce and McEachern had ridden 966 miles and 3 laps, and were to the front, an advantage which was secured through an accident to the French team, Gougoultz and early this afternoon. BASEBALL. WILL HEAR PLAYERS' GRIEV-ANCES. New York Dec 11 -- It was announced by President Young this afternoon that a committee consisting of Messrs. Soden, Brush and Hart had been appointed by the National Baseball League to listen to the demands of the players' organization. This committee meet the committee from the players' association tomorrow morning. President Young announced later in the evening that the regular meeting of the deague would not be called until tomorrow morning. "There are several matters that the magnates wish to talk over informally before go-ing into executive session," said Mr. Young, "and it will be very late before the informal discussion ends. For that reason we decided not to call a regular meeting until tomorrow." It was said late tonight that the board of directors had taken up the charges of misconduct made by the Brooklyn club officially against McGraw and Robinson, of St. Louis. In a game at Washington Park, it is alleged, these two players assaulted Umpire Gaffney. The board, according to good authority, dismissed the Brooklyn club's complaint. In reference to the statement made by President Zimmer, of the players' association, that the play-National, American and Eastern Leagues were pledged not to sign contracts for next year until the demands of the organization had been acceded to by the magnates, Frank Selee, the Boston manager, said: "That is not so. Several of my players have already signed, and I know that others

FISTIC. SILER'S STATEMENT.

Chicago, Dec. 11.-George Siler, who is to referee the Gans-McGovern fight on Thursday, has the following statement in the Tribune: "Betting on the outcome of the Gans-McGovern contest, which takes place at Tattersail's on Thursday night, is at fever heat. The McGovernites are in the majority, and they are willing to wager all kinds of money at evens that Gans does not score a knockout, and $100 to $250 that Terry puts Gans away. A few bets were registered today that McGovern would not be on his feet at the end of the sixth round. According to the articles there cannot be a draw. There must be a winner and a loser, and, therefore, Gans can win only with a knockout or on a foul, while McGovern can win by staying the limit, with a knockout or on a foul." POSTPONED.

Memphis, Tenn., Dec. 11.-The fight between James Scanlon, of Pittsburg, and Dan Creedon, of St. Louis, sche-duled for tonight has been postponed until Friday night. Scanlon sprained his shoulder while exercising today.

Profitable Advertising "Special."

The December edition of Profitable Advertising, Boston, is by far the most pretentious issue of an advertising journal that has ever come to our notice. It contains (including colored inserts) 140 pages of live, up-to-date matter pertaining to advertising and publishing interests, all profusely and handsomely illustrated. From an artistic and typographic standpoint, the magazine is well-night perfect, and every one, not alone advertisers, will interested in reading this special number. It contains a very readable account of the development of the publication itself. with special refer ence to its offices, people, mechanical facilities, etc., with full announcement of the award of prizes in recent com-petition for best magazine and newspaper designs, and a volume of miscellaneous reading of great value and interest to all lines of business. Those of our readers who are unfamiliar with the merits of this leader among advertising journals should send at once for a copy. Ten cents is the price and it cannot begin to represent the actual cost of production.
