FROM COWES TO PORTSMOUTH

Passage of the Funeral Yacht Through the Ten-Mile Lines of War Ships, Including Japanese "Hatsuse," the Largest Naval Machine Afloat—"Queen's Weather" Favoured the Occasion—Touching Spectacle at Osborne House—A Pageant of Surpassing Magnificence.

Cowes, Feb. 1.—The mounted grooms who headed the line of the procession from Osborne House were bright scarlet. With the massed bands were no fewer than forty muffled drums. Among the Highlanders were seven Queen's Foresters in royal Stewart tartan. Following them, two pipers wailed the sad music of the Black Watch dirge.

The King, Emperor William and the Duke of Connaught walked abreast, followed by the princes. They stepped slowly and mournfully, a sad-looking group in spite of the brilliancy of their uniforms. But for

A TOUCHING SPECTACLE nothing could equal the band of mourners surrounding Queen Alexandra, the ladies clothed in the deepest black, walking three by three along the shrub-lined avenue, and into the public road, like the lowly peasants at the funeral of a humble retainer.

The pipers had followed the first dirge by the touching lament, "The Flowers of the Forest," which represents the withering of the last and best of them. As they reached the Queen's gate and wailed their closing strains, the muffled drums rolled out with recurring rhythmic beats, and the massed bands burst forth into the magnificent music of Chopin's funeral march.
