

ROGERS FLAYED; CROWD CHEERS

Missouri's Attorney Center
of Strong Scene.

IN FIGHT AGAINST STANDARD

Shows That Head of the Great Trust Was Filippant and Frivolous in Answering.

New York, Jan. 14.—Applause in a court room in this city is unusual, but Attorney-General Hadley, of Missouri, won it at the conclusion of his argument in the Henry H. Rogers proceedings before Justice Glidersleeve yesterday.

Opposing counsel had impugned his motives in coming to New York to get testimony in his crusade against the Standard Oil Company.

After he had finished with the legal aspect of his contention that Mr. Rogers should be compelled to answer questions as to his ownership of stock in the Standard Oil Company, of Missouri, he devoted a minute or so to defense of himself.

He did it so neatly and effectively that scores of those who heard him clapped their hands and stamped their feet until the court officers rapped for order.

The demonstration was remarkable not only because Mr. Hadley is a stranger, but also because the audience was not composed of ordinary court hangers-on. Most of those who listened with keen interest to the arguments were lawyers who entertained toward the slim, square-jawed young man from Missouri only sentiments of curiosity when he arose to answer the distinguished counsel on the other side. At the conclusion of the proceedings many of these lawyers gathered about him in the corridor and congratulated him.

Mr. Hadley said that he had come here under commission from the supreme court of Missouri and had been met by flippant answers, by an attempt to inject into the proceedings a spirit of frivolity, and by an expression of contempt for the supreme court of Missouri. Referring to the objection of his opponents to the newspaper reporters being present and in the published accounts of the inquiry proceedings, Mr. Hadley said:

"I contend that the witness, Rogers, is in contempt of the jurisdiction of this court. If there is any sensationalism in that, he, and not I, is responsible."

"My motives have been questioned by counsel who never dared to question them at home. Let those people understand that they cannot sow the wind without reaping whirlwind of disaster."

Attorney-General Hadley, in his argument, worked himself up to a strong pitch of indignation as he got around to the gibes and jeers of opposing counsel as to his reason for coming to New York to take testimony.

"The question my motives," he said, bitterly, "is a foreign jurisdiction, when they have never dared question them at home."

"It is true that reporters for the press have been present when these questions were asked, but it was a matter of public interest and they had a right to be there."

"If there have been sensational reports of the examination they have been occasioned by the flippant and ridicule of the witness, Rogers—by his openly expressed contempt for the supreme court of Missouri."

"Actions such as those of this witness and others tend to influence the passions of ignorant people. I want to ask these men if they have considered

GIVE HER A CHANCE

Old Dame Nature Knows How.

"Old dame nature has a sure way of curing sick people by food if the kind she wants is supplied the body and the person don't interfere with drugs."

She prescribes such things as fresh air and sunshine, exercise and right food as her principal agencies.

Grape-Nuts is a natural food, prepared from wholesome grains, with no drugs nor chemical ingredients or processes, and is shipped from the factory in such pre-digested form that the weakest stomach will readily assimilate it.

An Ohio woman who suffered for twelve years from nervous prostration, night sweats, imperfect circulation, insomnia, etc., tells how Grape-Nuts food restored her to health and happiness in less than twelve weeks.

"I was so reduced in strength with untold suffering, without vitality or ambition, bed-ridden and unable to wait on myself, that I felt obliged to doctor all the time, taking one prescription after another, but deriving no permanent benefit from any. Sometimes I would feel better for a little while, but soon the effects of the medicine would pass away and I would lapse back to my former condition."

"Last May at my mother's solicitation I concluded to quit medicines and try Grape-Nuts food. It did not work a miracle at once, but slowly and surely, day by day, it built me up and strengthened me. I soon began to sit up, then to work a little, then to get out and see my friends, gaining meanwhile in sleep, till at last, by the end of June I was able to leave home for a visit (taking my Grape-Nuts with me, be sure), returning with a healthy interest in my domestic duties and thank Heaven, the strength to perform them!"

"That is so, and I am stronger in mind also and quicker and more vigorous intellectually, due to the use of Grape-Nuts food." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

There's a reason. Read the little book, "The Road to Wellville," in packages.

that if they sow the wind they must reap the whirlwind of disaster."

A decision in the matter was deferred until Monday.

Attorney-General Hadley continued today the taking of testimony before Commissioner Sanborn, and at the end of the day an adjournment was ordered until Jan. 30, when Mr. Hadley and the other attorneys interested in the matter will return to New York.

MANY PACIFIC ISLANDS SWEEPED INTO OCEAN

Marshall Islands had never been visited by such a hurricane before. High winds and the great waves that accompanied them had sometimes done damage, but nothing comparable with that of the storm of June 30 last.

The storm first struck the islands of the eastern part of the group and here the greatest damage was done. The little Knox Island was entirely washed away. Where it stood are now seen only two or three small sandbanks surrounded by the sea.

The mass of water rising as high as the crowns of the coco palm trees simply swept everything away. These waves driven by the wind were as restless as the Johnston flood.

Of the 60 natives living on the island 35 were borne off by the waves, crushed on the reef or drowned in the flood. Only two boys escaped with their lives.

In the whirl of the waters they managed to get hold on the trunk of a breadfruit tree, to which they clung for 24 hours, until they were finally washed up on the shore of the Mill Atoll. They could not have survived such an ordeal if they had been cast away in a colder latitude.

Three Great Waves.

The hurricane struck the Mill Atoll at 8 a.m., bringing with it three great waves following one another at intervals of about three minutes. The third and highest wave towered above the crowns of the palm trees, around which the nuts grew, and literally swept everything before it. The three waves rose to a height of from 35 to 50 feet above the usual water level.

The whole southern coast of the atoll, consisting of inhabited islands, thickly strewn with palm growths, was swept clean of everything rising above the sand. Only two little spots were left above the waters, their immunity being due to the protection afforded by Knox Island, a little to the south. Seventy lives were lost on the Mill Atoll.

Fifty miles farther north the Arno Atoll was greatly damaged and on the southeast side three-fourths of the land was washed away. Only eight lives were lost, however, this being due to the fact that the east side of the atoll is so narrow that most of the natives as the wind rose to a hurricane force had time to reach the shallow lagoon within, where they remained immersed up to their necks until the storm subsided.

Big waves spent their force upon the land and the natives in the lagoon escaped their violence.

Several big waves swept over part of Jaluit Atoll, destroying the houses of the entire European population. The missionaries hurried with their pupils into the great warehouse of the Jaluit Trading Company, which, fortunately, was not damaged from its firm foundation and all taking refuge there escaped unharmed.

Jaluit is the center of the island trade. A number of sailing vessels at anchor in front of the reef were dashed on the rocks and wrecked. The steamer of the Jaluit company, moored with two big anchors, put on all steam to keep its head to the wind, and thus escaped destruction.

The eastern islands of the Jaluit Atoll were almost wholly swept away down to the reef so that small vessels are now passing over the places where they stood. Seventy-three natives of this atoll lost their lives.

The western islands of the Marshall group were also damaged, but the loss was trifling as compared with that of the eastern atolls.

The atolls of this group are scattered over a large area so that some of them are hundreds of miles from their nearest neighbors. The result is that communications between them are infrequent.

An illustration of this is the fact that fears are expressed in the latest news from the Marshall Islands that Lelang Island, which scarcely rises above the water level and is inhabited by one European and twenty natives, may have been destroyed by the storm. News as to their fate could not be obtained until the close of the year, as a ship from Jaluit visits the island once in six months to carry provisions to the inhabitants and bring off the copra they have prepared.

CUT TO BITS BY CAR

Peddler of Toronto Junction Meets
With Terrible Death.

Toronto Junction, Jan. 13.—A terrible accident occurred last evening between Royce avenue and Humber-side avenue, when a man, who has been identified as John Halaney, was literally cut to pieces by a car, No. 840, going to the Junction. The man was lying across the east rail and must have been very drunk. At the pines, the nearest hotel, the proprietor said he had not seen deceased all day.

It was a single truck car, and it had to be jacked up, so that the body severed from the body, as was also the left leg below the knee. Deceased was dismembered, and the remains presented a terrible sight. William Riches, barber, identified the man as John Halaney, and said he had been with him during the afternoon. Deceased was a peddler, and was a familiar figure in the Junction. He was about 45 years of age.

PROTECTION DEAD SAYS CHURCHILL

Greatest Hour Since That of Reform Bill.

HOW ABOUT CHAMBERLAIN?

Will Balfour's Fate Fall Upon the Birmingham Man?—What the Organs Say.

London, Jan. 13.—"We have killed protection. This is the beginning of such a political upheaval as has not been seen in England since the days of the great reform bill. Manchester has saved herself by her exertions; she will save England by her example."

Thus spoke Winston Churchill Saturday night, and his opinion, that free trade has gained a victory is the opinion of the more responsible of the Unionist newspapers, though many of them attempt to explain the result of the elections of Saturday as due more to questions like Chinese labor in South Africa, war taxation, etc.

Nowhere, however, is there any hint at minimizing the hurricane that has overtaken the Unionist party or a suggestion of doing anything but to beat an orderly retreat and save what is possible from the rout.

The question now uppermost in all minds is what fate will befall Joseph Chamberlain at Birmingham. The Morning Post editorially points out that the temporary prosperity of the cotton industry may have made Balfourian measures of tariff reform.

It says that should Birmingham follow the example of Manchester, the meaning of the country's voice would no longer be a matter for the slightest doubt.

The Unionist Graphic, in a temperate article, says: "It cannot be doubted that the country was not prepared for such a revolution in its fiscal policy, and declined to grasp the subtle distinction between free trade and protection, as illustrated by Mr. Balfour's half-way house."

The Standard, in an editorial, thinks that the fear of American reprisals on the staple industry in the event of the adoption of the fiscal reform largely influenced the action of the Manchester voters.

The Daily Telegraph says: "The combined forces of radicalism, separatism, socialism and secularism, brought a black day for the Unionists. The paper admits that the main cause is that the country will not sanction any modification of the free trade system."

The Liberal organs naturally are jubilant. The Daily Chronicle says: "It is the result without a parallel in the history of English electioneering, and will all every free trader with deep thankfulness."

The Daily News heralds Winston Churchill as "the rising hope of the Liberal party, a man whose career has now become one of the most interesting in the Empire."

Mr. Balfour, though evidently deeply disappointed at the loss of his seat in Manchester, displayed great calmness of demeanor on Saturday night when he delivered an admirably pleasing and impressive speech.

Already the former premier has had several safe seats offered him, but as yet he has reached no decision.

MR. BALFOUR BADLY BEATEN

London, Jan. 13.—The political map of England today underwent a striking change as a result of Parliamentary elections held in 39 constituencies in widely scattered, but important, centers in which the Liberals gained eighteen seats. The Laborites, who are counted among the Liberal gains, secured four new seats against Unionist candidates.

In the eastern division of Manchester, Arthur J. Balfour, the former prime minister, was defeated by T. G. Horridge, Liberal, who was conceded even by the Liberals a weak candidate against such a person as Mr. Balfour. Mr. Horridge secured the remarkable majority of 1,960.

This victory, notwithstanding the Liberal predictions, was a decidedly sensational outcome of the day's polling and will, it is believed, enormously affect the elections, which will continue for a fortnight.

Winston Churchill, Liberal and Free Trader, won the seat for the northwest division of Manchester, from W. Joynton-Hicks, Conservative, by a majority of 1,241.

Everywhere the Liberal majorities were increased and the net result of the first day's contest between the great political parties was overwhelmingly in favor of the present government, although but 66 seats are now filled out of the 679 required for a new Parliament which meets at Westminster on Feb. 15.

The returns from Grimsby which were polled today will not be declared before Monday, and the elections at Derbyshire University, which commenced today, will continue until next Thursday.

Little disorder attended the polling at any places. The excitement at Manchester was intense, and the candidates and their constituents worked with feverish activity, especially in the district Mr. Balfour was contesting, when reports were circulated late in the afternoon that Mr. Balfour was in danger of defeat.

The returns coming in late tonight from all points created a profound sensation in political circles. Fleet

Headache, yet Carter's Little Liver Pills are equally valuable in Constipation, curing and preventing this annoying complaint, while they also correct all disorders of the stomach, stimulate the liver and regulate the bowels. Even if they only cure.

Ache they would be almost priceless to those who suffer from this distressing complaint; but for those who are not so afflicted, they are a most valuable remedy for the biliousness and indigestion which are so common, and they are able in so many ways that they will not be willing to do without them. But after all sick headache.

Is the base of so many lives that here is where the cure is to be found. Our pills cure it while others do not.

Defeat of Balfour a Surprise.

Political clubs received the returns
by special wires and everywhere the defeat of Mr. Balfour was received as a most complete surprise. Then as Liberal gain was added to Liberal gain, until the remarkable total of 22 seats,
counting the Laborites, out of 39 constituencies was reached, it was agreed that the Liberal majority in the next Parliament would show the overwhelming decision of the country.

Dispatches received from Manchester say that the excitement there tonight was indescribable. Great crowds swarmed the streets cheering and demonstrating with the utmost enthusiasm.

Mr. Balfour tonight addressed a gathering at the Conservative club. He acknowledged the gravity of the disaster, but predicted a short life for the Liberal government. He urged the party to continue to work for the party and to face the reversal of today's results.

Of course, Mr. Balfour will find another safe seat before the elections are over by one of the Unionist candidates retiring in his favor. Up to the present, however, there is no indication where the former premier can find this place where he can secure a majority which will enable him to take his seat
as a leader on the front opposition bench.

Sir Gilbert Parker Stays.

Among the Unionists who saved their seats in the general landslide was Sir Gilbert Parker, at Graysend, with a majority of 800 over J. MacPherson, the Labor and Liberal candidate.

George Wyndham, the former secretary for Ireland, the Unionist candidate for Dover, also retained his seat
over R. J. Bryce, Liberal and Free Trader.

Five of the six divisions of Manchester were won by the Liberals, the other going to a Laborite. Elsewhere in the manufacturing districts in Lancashire and Yorkshire, the Liberals took seats from Unionist candidates.

Two London constituencies voted today, Newington and Walworth, the last named residdin, in a Liberal gain.

There were no elections in Wales
or Ireland and only one in Scotland, Edinburgh, where the Liberal majority was only slightly increased.

One of the most remarkable reversals was at Halifax. Of the two seats there one hitherto had been held by a Unionist, but today one Liberal and one Laborite were returned.

Seventy-three constituencies will vote next Monday, including twenty in London and all those in Leeds and the other important centers. The seats of the cabinet and of a number of prominent men of both parties are involved.

Features of Campaign.

There have been two features of the lightest side of the campaign which have added to the gaiety of the fight.
These have been provided by the women advocates of female suffrage, who have been attending meetings and hacking candidates.

Winston Churchill, in his reply, "I will not be mildly," to one of the men in Manchester has become one of the campaign's classic phrases. At one of Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman's meetings no less than seven women

suffragists who are now nick-named cripples, who are being forcibly removed.
The woman who has come out in a fierce light of the electoral fight
more than any other is the Countess of Warwick, who is working hard, addressing meetings on behalf of the Socialist Democrats.

The countess is bitterly indignant that newspapers not giving her meetings confine their reports to lengthy descriptions of her motor cars and costumes. She herself has begged her comrades not to regard her as a west end woman in a motor car, but as a fellow-worker and has written to the press complaining that in noticing one of her speeches, the subject matter was completely ignored in order to record

taken in time it will prevent it reaching that stage, and will give the greatest relief to the poor sufferer from this terrible malady.

Be careful when purchasing to see that you get the genuine Dr. Wood's Norway
