MASTER MASON

PLUS SMOKING TOBACCO

It's the characteristic fragrant aroma of MASTER MASON that has made it so popular with discriminating smokers—but it has other qualities: it burns longer, holds its fire better and is sweeter than most pipe tobaccos.

Sm like Master Mason. It's good tobacco.

MASTER MASON—ready rubbed—for those who like it that way is the same good plug tobacco cut and rubbed ready for the pipe. It is put up in tin tins and paper packages.

THE GASPE COAST

(Toronto Mail and Empire.)

One of the most romantic and least-known holiday regions in Canada is and inaccessible for the ordinary vacationist, but for the geologist, botanist, ornithologist, historian, artist and sportsman, an unfurling delight. Gaspé Peninsula forms the lower lip of the St. Lawrence. The great ocean steamers pass too far to the north to see it as they skirt the shores of Anticosti, but it is just over the horizon to the southwest. The peninsula is deeply indented on the north by Gaspé Basin and on the south by the Baie de Chaleur and on the point jutting out between them lies the picturesque village of Percé, with the famous piered rock and the Island of Bonaventure just off shore. Gaspé Basin is familiar to Canadians as the secret rendezvous of the great Canadian Armada of thirty-two troopships which sailed for England on Oct. 6, 1914.

Both the Basin and the Baie de Chaleur are known as among the first landing places of Jacques Cartier in 1534; and since that time the Gaspé coast has been better known for its cod-fishing and its extraordinary geological formation. The interior of Gaspé Peninsula is an unbroken and uninhabited wilderness of spruce and pine, a magnificent view of which may be obtained from Mont Ste. Anne, behind Percé village. The Gaspé coast is fringed with a strip of fertile farm land studded with a succession of thriving fishing villages with which is associated an interesting history. Three centuries ago the adventurous fishermen of Normandy used to sail their little ships across the Atlantic attracted by the rich cod-fishing awaiting them on the "banks" of the Gaspé coast, and from spring to winter the coast was a busy place, as the fishermen dried their fish on the shingle beaches of "flakes" of spruce and salted them down for shipment to France, the Mediterranean or South America.

The Cod Industry.

About the year 1760 the fisheries became so important that permanent settlements were formed along the coast, and to Charles Robin, a shrewd member of an old Jersey family, is given credit for the organization and development of the cod-fishing industry which has flourished ever since. From the efforts of Charles Robin arose the great Charles Robin-Collins

Co., still known as the "C. R. C." Red granite posts with "C. R. C." cut on them still mark the boundaries of their property. Like the Hudson Bay Co., it supplied the fishermen with their boats, nets, domestic supplies, etc., from the various villages, and in return the fishermen received credit for the fish they brought in. There were about thirty such stations, with headquarters at Paspébiac, on the Chaleur side, and reaching out even as far as Labrador. Apprentices were brought out from the Channel Island and trained in the cod-fishing and mercantile business.

It is not surprising that there is still a strong Channel Island atmosphere about the Gaspé coast. Jersey willows grow thick in the villages, Jersey and Guernsey are still home to many of the old and new residents, who speak the old Norman French and crisp English equally well. They bear French names, as a rule, but there are no more devoted British Imperialists in the empire than the sturdy Islanders whose proud boast is that theirs is the only part of the British Empire which has never been conquered. The little churches on the hillside, above the villages contain tombstones (cut in Jersey or Guernsey) showing the names of successive generations of historic Channel Island families, and the marriage registers of the coast clergy read like Channel Island directories. They are proud of their ancient lineage and there is a fine flavor of the Old World in their charming courtesy of speech and hospitality. Much might be written of the cod-fishing; it still flourishes, with methods little altered from those of two centuries ago. The most attractive of the villages is Percé.

A Dramatic Approach.

The background of the village is a vast amphitheatre sweeping up to the peak of Mont Ste. Anne, from which a wonderful view may be had of the sea, the forest interior, Gaspé Basin and the Baie de Chaleur. The approach by sea at early morning or in the evening is dramatic. A few hundred yards from shore, like a colossal warship advancing bow on, arises the pierced rock, a stupendous mass of limestone 150 feet long and 300 feet high, with two arches still remaining. Its origin and its fossils are magnets for geologists. To painters it is a delight and a despair; no artist will ever catch the delicate, fleeting tints which change hourly from dawn to sunset. Gulls wheel screaming around its lofty crest. Sombre cormorants pick and fro. To see the rock emerging from fog into the sunshine is a glimpse into fairyland. Two miles distant lies Bonaventure Island, once the haunt of privateers but now the peaceful sanctuary for myriads of sea-fowl. Gannets and Kittiwakes rest like banks of snow upon the ledges of its precipitous cliffs; puffins and murres sedately stand guard near by. Of late Canadian Government ornithologists have made valuable studies of local bird life, and for back in 1848 Sir William Logan (to whom a tablet has recently been erected in Percé) made exhaustive studies of Gaspé's

MORE MEN THAN WOMEN HAVE APPENDICITIS

Medical reports show men are more subject to appendicitis, although many sudden cases occur among women. It can be guarded against by preventing intestinal infection. The intestinal antiseptic, Atabactin, acts on BOTH upper and lower bowel, removing all food, decaying matter which might cause infection. It brings out matter you never thought was in your system and which may have been poisoning you for months. Atabactin is EXCELLENT for gas on the stomach. A. McE. McDonald, Druggist.
