Mr. Lunnergan, solicitor for the new company, said they had no desire to defraud the creditors, but if this lien were given it would be reditors, but if this lien were given it would be reditors, but if this lien were given it would be reditors, but if this lien were given it would be reditors, but if this lien were given it would be round a disputed claim. And, anyway, MacKarlane had no right to the lien, as he only had a disputed claim, the amount of which might be greatly lessened by the court. Mr. Lacoste, Speaker of the Senate, who was well up in the facts of the case, had expressed the opinion that when the matter was sifted it would be found that the company had a claim of about $50,000. against MacKarlane, instead of the other way.

Mr. Ives here rose and claimed that the meeting had been packed by the promoters of the bill in order to defeat Mr. Cockburn's amendment, expressing surprise at such conduct.

The accusation was warmly denied by Mr. Beausoliel and others. After a long discussion the bill was amended by the insertion of solutions of the bill was amended by the insertion of solutions. New York state leads, with 2354 societies.

Our Outfit.

(From Millbrook Reporter, July 2, 1891.)

The entire new outfit of The Reporter office was purchased from that old and reliable Scotch house of Miller & Richard. Mr. R. L. Patterson of 7 Jordan-street, Toronto, is their very efficient Canadian manager, with whom it is a pleasure to do business. The hahdsome face of type which is used in The Reporter we feel satisfied could not be equalled by any other house. What prompted us more than anything else to purchase from this firm was that the type used is The Reporter office at the time it was burned out was purchased from this firm many years ago, and we are not exaggerating when we say it did not show the slightest wear. Publishers requiring a new outfit or those commencing business cannot do better than patronize this house, as there is kept in stock a full supply of everything required in a printing office. The employees are obliging and lend valuable assistance to customers. Mr. Doughty, who placed our large press in position, is a first-class mechanic, and deserves the high opinion which his employers entertain of him.
