"Squibographs"

As an athlete Paavo Nurmi may not be much to look at but he is a "rum one to go."

The thief who stole the pole from in front of an Omaha barber shop is now wearing a striped suit.

Listeners in on radio sermons miss the musical clink of the coins dropping in the collection plates.

The Nevada legislator who advocates abolishing upper berths in sleeping cars may be riding for a fall.

A beauty shop for dogs has been opened in Los Angeles. The water spaniels love to splash around in the permanent waves.

Viewing the alluring pictures in the seed catalogues is said to stimulate the jaded mind after solving a cross-word puzzle.

A scientist has discovered that moths have no sense of smell. Housewives are satisfied that they have fierce appetites.

Straws show which way the trade winds are blowing. Canadian dealers are shipping hay and straw to Ireland.

The Alberta farmer who traded his ranch for a California orange grove is convinced that he has been handed a lemon.

Imitation is said to be the sincerest form of flattery, but Charlie Chaplin protests when another actor copies his inflated trousers.

A Denver judge has ruled that the first straw hat of the season is a logical target for boys equipped with pea-shooters.

A Winnipeg man is under arrest for "salting" a gold mine. Stockholders fear that salt-petre may not save their investment.

From the altar to the cell was the fate of a Guelph bridegroom who started serving a prison term a few hours after his marriage.

"Resolved: That the powder puff is of more value to the human race than slambang or hairroom," was the subject for a recent debate in an eastern college. The judges decided that no man can be handsome when his hair is standing on end and the sheiks lost the decision.

Eggs have dropped to 25 cents a dozen in Texas. Governor "Ma" Ferguson urges citizens to eat an egg a day to make poultry pay.

To ascertain the action of certain microbes a London specialist swallowed a tube full of the alleged poisonous germs. He is now reported to be dieting to reduce his weight.

Owing to his wonderful speed Paavo Nurmi is not one of those who can read as they run. The letters jumble together like the number of a radio station.

The inventor of barbed wire recently celebrated his 99th birthday. His invention probably wrecked more trousers and other garments than camphor balls ever saved.

It is announced that five per cent beer will be on sale in Ontario on April 1st. The date is ominous for those thirsty souls who expect the "kick" of pre war brew.

When the usher in a Winnipeg church tripped and spilled the contents of the collection plate, the organist with great presence of mind prevented a stampee by playing "Gathering in the Sheldals."

The Canadian manager of a number of red-front chain stores is retiring from business to engage in politics. Playing tag with politics is a different proposition from attaching price cards on 5, 10 and 15 cent goods.

While excavating the site of an ancient city in Greece tablets were discovered showing that a tax similar to our income tax was in force. Further research may reveal that the old timers were taxed for the axle used on their chariots.

Miss Abbey Rockefeller, reputed to be the wealthiest girl in the United States, is to be married in May to a "struggling" young lawyer. The prospective groom's struggling may be confined to cutting coupons in future.

Postal authorities in Vienna have ruled that postmen are not required to deliver mail to places where they are exposed to attacks by dogs. Their bark may be worse than their bite, but the carriers have no time to reason why.

A commission appointed in England to investigate the food served prisoners in penal institutions reports that the menus are composed of too much suet pudding, porridge and other fattening articles of diet. As a result the prisoners are becoming fat and lazy. Grapefruit, oranges, Brussels sprouts and berries in season might have a stimulating effect.
