O. S. CLARKE, Agent

Mr. Reid's Sermon

"The Golden Rule In Business."

PUBLISHED BY REQUEST FROM MONTREAL WITNESS

Another way in which the utter Christlessness of the business of today shows itself is in the wall all competition. Hundreds of honest and hard-working men are being ruined because of the unjustifiable monopoly of large combines. In this very city there are good honest men who have been driven out of business by these department stores. These stores pay their small tax, comparatively speaking. They hire cheap labor. They concentrate labor and energy, and thus can undersell the middle man who handles but one department. This is right from the business standpoint of today, but not from the standpoint of the text. Is it nothing that honest, hard-working, God-fearing cities be ruined and left penniless? As soon as a man ceases to be a man and becomes a mere tool, as soon as he is wrenched from the starting line of a noble, high time to call a halt and the Church of God and the laws of the land to take the matter up. My text finds but little sympathy and little illustration in the business world of today. Business means the ethics of the jungle; it means unscrupulous competition to enrich years; it means the unscrupulous creation of rings and corners which bring want and famine to thousands of homes; it means grinding the poor; it means supreme carelessness of how others live if only we can gain in the scramble for wealth. While we have advanced past the mere brute stage so far as mere animal strength is concerned, yet we have never passed that stage in that competition that we call business. If Christ came here he would say to us: "You are all wrong. Your commercial life is on an entirely unchristian basis. The foundation principle of my gospel is love and self-sacrifice. That of yours is competition and the slaughter and trampling down of your fellow-men. I can imagine the Master looking on today with tear-dimmed eyes as he sees all the 'worse' being perpetrated under our present business methods. He would say to us: 'I suppose to be governed by Christian principles. Then Christ sought an artisan, a low-browed, stunted, haggard man, and a motherless girl, whose fingers thin, pushed from her fainty want and sin. These sat He in the midst of them, and as they drew back their garments, He said: 'For fear of defilement: 'Lo, there,' said He. 'The image you give me of Me!'

(2) In the next place, let me point you to a few reasons for this state of things. There must be something radically wrong in the very constitution of things to make such conditions possible under the beneficent reign of Him who laid down these principles for the benefit of the human race. The very foundation stones of his kingdom are being overturned. There is something radically wrong in our country, something unchristian, where it is possible for a man to make a million dollars in a year, and where another, who has worked just as hard and has just as much to show for it, but who has not the same money-making power, never earns it but simply possesses it. What should rightly belong to some of his fellow-creators. A man who started a year ago in the exchange business in New York with but a very few hundred dollars now retires with a million dollars. Another man, who has worked just as hard and has just as much to show for it, but who has not the same money-making power, never earns it but simply possesses it. What should rightly belong to some of his fellow-creators. A man who started a year ago in the exchange business in New York with but a very few hundred dollars now retires with a million dollars. Another man, who has worked just as hard and has just as much to show for it, but who has not the same money-making power, never earns it but simply possesses it. What should rightly belong to some of his fellow-creators.

Quiet Sunday in Cleveland.
Cleveland, June 18.—There were no new developments in the strike of street railway men yesterday, principally for the reason that the company made no attempt to operate cars, except on the Euclid avenue line.

No Stay for Parrott.
Hamilton, June 18.—The Minister of Justice has notified Sheriff Middleton that the execution of Ben Parrott, the murderer, must take place next Friday, and that he will have to find another hangman, as Radcliffe, the Government executioner, is at the Pacific Coast and cannot be here. The Governor-General has signed the death warrant.

best means of cutting down the wages of the working man, and raising the price of his living is found in this very point. Of course the same thing is true of the working man in his trades union, Knights of Labor, etc. Wherever you find this spirit it is heathen and is not of the spirit of Christ.

But after all has been said the root of the matter lies deeper than this. The whole trouble lies in the innate selfishness of the human heart. Man is by nature selfish. It is his nature to seek his welfare and that alone. If others interfere in the attainment of the highest of joy for self then the one that interferes must be sacrificed. There is a tremendous amount of the animal in all of us, and as long as man is man without any of the grace of God in his heart, things will go on as they go today, and men will continue to rob and plunder their fellowmen for their own aggrandizement. Inmate greed, diabolical selfishness, unmitigated carelessness and carelessness for the welfare of others, are the prime factors in our business principles that have so little of the Golden Rule in them.

(3) But I must turn for a moment to the third point, viz: What is the remedy? As I ask this question I hear a great many answers coming up from the grove—ravelling children of men. One very large party says: 'You could have prohibition and Dives abolished. Now, prohibition would do a great deal towards alleviating our troubles and Dives would do a great deal towards alleviating our troubles, especially for legislation on moral questions; still, this would not remedy our wrongs. Another says: 'If you will but adopt communism as a remedy all will be well.' Let the property be owned by all and all profits be shared equally by all. Communism means the abolition of inheritance, practically, the abolition of the family, the abolition of nationalities, of property, and of entire of religion. In the early church they tried this plan, but it was a failure. Soon we hear of Ananias and Sapphira. Communism might do for us if we were all angels, but not otherwise. There is not equality between men and there cannot be equality between Luvras and Dives. It is but blindness and ignorance to imagine that you can remedy social inequalities by spoiling the rich and enriching the poor. Were you to level all today, in a year's time the same inequalities would prevail again. True, Luvras is at the gate of Dives pleading for a morsel of bread, but you cannot redress his wrongs by robbing or ruining the boss of contemptuous Dives. Communism will never meet and remedy the social wrongs of today and bring golden rule in fashion in man's dealing with each other.

But another says the best plan is to adopt anarchism. Communism says let us all share alike; anarchism says that is all a mistake. All form of human co-operation is a failure. Let us destroy all law—let us throw off all restraints. Anarchism is the French revolution in its most bloody, flaming cities, the wisest heads spitted on bayonets, the best results of civilization shattered in the dust, a socialism of lust and blasphemy, of dishonour and hatred, the first article of whose creed is that there is no God and Christianity is an exploded fable. Anarchism is earthly, sensual, devilish.

But another comes forward and says that socialism will cure all our ills. Socialism has accomplished much in many places in the world, but it is not the solution of the problem of human relationship. The only way that the socialization of socialism would be a good thing. For instance, I believe that our government should own all our railways. If this were so the immense fortunes accumulated by many men would be an impossibility. Every government in the world now owns the railways. In Canada, Australia, where this is so, you can ride a mile for two cents, and the employees only work eight hours per day, and are better paid than they are in the United States. In Hungary you can ride six miles for a cent.

But while all this may be a sort of provisional and temporary remedy against the inequalities of the present social system, in the world, the electric light, the waterworks, the street railways, and the city telegraph, and the result has been that all these commodities have gone down more than one-half and the men employed receive nearly double their former wages. I would also have the government own the land and operate all the great businesses of the country, especially in the line of supplying the necessities of the nation. The present system of business proves itself wrong by the immense wrongs it produces. It has proved itself to be the cause of the greatest misery and the greatest wrong by which men can climb to the top of the ladder of their lives, and the greatest wrong by which men can be made to suffer. Let us then try some other plan and see if the old evils cannot be avoided.

the shattering of the whole fabric of social, physical, and moral tyranny. Every down-trodden prisoner, every victim of a vicious ecclesiastical, regal, or moral system felt a new thrill of hope. He preached liberty to the captive and deliverance to those that were bound. Behind him came the dawn of a new moral and social era—the morning that has been gradually lifting ever since. And so we must come back to the old gospel of Jesus Christ. Whenever I see a great wrong anywhere I feel that the only hope for its remedy lies in Jesus Christ, the man of Nazareth. In Christ and in him alone lies the solution of these great social problems. The best way you can help on the great social remedy of today is by the acceptance of Christ as a Saviour yourself, and then by going out and getting the world to accept him as well. As I look abroad on the world and see the wrongs and woes and inequalities I often wonder when the redemption will take place and the kingdom of God come, and to me the time often seems long, but I know that God is behind it all; that he is working out his great purposes and plans and that just as sure as the sun shines and the day dawns, so surely will sin and evil and selfishness fly away from before the onward march of the Sun of Righteousness.

When crossing the Atlantic I used frequently to go on deck alone at night, when all was still, and taking my place on the front of the vessel I have thought what an insignificant thing is man in all that 'lovely immensity of foaming sea and angry sky.' I have stood there as the sun raged and foamed, as if wanting to swallow the living freight. No sound save the cry of the wind among the spars, the throb of the great engines and the sound of 'many rushing waters around the vessel's keel.' When standing there I felt the mystery of life more than ever before. I was conscious of the 'moon and wonder and diapason of the sea.' Then out of the stillness there came a voice ringing down from that swaying mast, the lookout man keeps his weary watch: 'All's well and the light burns brightly.' How did I know that all was well? What knew I of the forces that were hidden in the mysterious throbbing heart of those mysterious engines, of the perils that glared on me in the breaking wave, or lay hidden in the dark cloud that lay just behind the horizon. I knew nothing. I was but a babe drifting on the face of the waters, but the voice went sounding away over the roaring sea—'All's well and the light burns brightly.' And the wind carried it away across the roaring waves; it palpitated around the rigging and it went up soaring and trembling among the cold stars. So I stand amid life's wild, angry seas and a 6-ft. force, and am ignorant and perplexed, but I am not alone in the dark night. The old world moves on to some appointed goal, though I know not the path. It has an all-wise steersman at the helm and amid all the loneliness and mystery and darkness and peril and uncertainty, I have learned to hear the voice of the Master saying: 'All's well, all's well!' And to feel content that when the eternal Sabbath morning dawns the Master will say to me: 'I shall know the Master and his all-wise steersman as I am known.'

The better day is coming, a morning promised and kept. When truth and right with holy might, shall overthrow the wrong, When Christ, the Lord, will listen to every cry, And stretch His hand 'er ears and lend with justice by and by.

BICYCLE VS HORSE.
THE HORSE WON
A contest between a bicycle and a horse took place on King Street shortly before noon today, in which the equine came out on top—literally speaking. Mr. Wendell Shantz, who was driving a spirited horse, turned around in front of Mackie's Block and collided with a Berlin wheel, ridden by Mr. Gus Wendt. He went flying, the front wheel was completely wrecked and enough straight wire being left for a hair pin. Mr. Wendt escaped unharmed.

TRACKMEN'S STRIKE OFF.
An Arrangement Has Been Arrived at Between the T.R. and the Men—Terms of the Settlement.
Montreal, June 18.—The Grand Trunk trackmen's strike has been called off. This is the result of the negotiations carried on by the Hon. J. M. Macmillan, Colonial Secretary Chamberlain, Hon. W. S. Fielding (Minister of Finance) and Sir Charles Tupper, whose county the disaster occurred.

The following is the official statement of the Grand Trunk re the strike: "The company are to restore to their former positions all the men and trackmen who have not been guilty of acts of violence during the period. The men have been on strike, applications for positions to be made in the usual form. If a man believed, however, as they had left the appeal to the general superintendent and general manager, and decisions in appeal referred to within 10 days after the return of the men to work."

"We will also within 30 days, and not exceeding 60 days, meet a committee of five of our employees representing the trackmen to discuss the questions of increased compensation and other matters which they may desire to take up at that time."

General Manager H. W. W. also met, and in so many words repeated what was contained in the company's official statement. He said all the men would have to make application, and that the company's employ. The general manager believed, however, that the strike was now definitely terminated.
