

married, in 1833, Mary, second daughter of Hon. Samuel George William Archibald and sister of Sir Edward Mortimer Archibald, and had a daughter Mary, who became the wife of William Johnstone, Esq., barrister at law, a son of Judge J. W. Johnstone, the great Conservative leader of Nova Scotia.

The children of Robert Hill*, as we have said, were all second cousins of Mrs. Francis Layton. Enumerating more carefully, these were: Charles John, of H. M. Dockyard; Eliza, wife of William M. Allan; Mary Rebecca, wife of Lieutenant Lyster, R. A.; Robert; Richard Cleveland; Thomas Liddell; William (who married Cavilla Albro, youngest daughter of Francis Stevens); Jane, wife of Hon. Richard McHeffey; and George, who married Mary Archibald. The children of Charles John Hill, and their first cousins, were thus, of course, third cousins of George Albert and Norman Joseph Layton. Among these were: Mrs. Grieve; Lady Herbert; Charles Hill, of Castle Malwood; Mrs. Forman; Mrs. Heathcote; Mrs. Sprott; Mrs. Keen; Mrs. Harrington; Lady Reid; and Mrs. Moren, of Halifax.

The children of these persons, including Arthur Hill, Esq., of Castle Malwood (the genealogist of the Hill family), are all fourth cousins of Francis Paul Hamilton Layton.

By his second marriage—probably in 1799—to Isabella Allan, the Hon. Charles Hill, of Halifax, allied his family to that of the Hon. Thomas Cochran, who was also from the North of Ireland, and the founder of another highly important family in Halifax. Mr. Cochran married (2), February 7, 1775, Jean Allan, sister of Mrs. Charles Hill, and by this marriage had Thomas, William, Eliza, Isabella, James, Rupert John, and two or three other children. Of this family, Thomas became chief justice of Prince Edward Island; William became a general in the army;
