FRIDAY MORNING, MAY 30

NEWMARKET'S OPPORTUNITY.

Newmarket has a chance today that will never occur again to get in on the ground floor with the hydro-electric power. The voters should reject the bylaw prepared by the council without giving them the alternative of publicly-owned power. The bylaw will tie them up for five years with the Metropolitan Co. at prices which are only lowered to meet hydro-electric competition, and which will never be lowered again, if the bylaw is passed. The hydro-electric prices, on the other hand, are based on actual cost, and as consumption increases, not only locally, but throughout the power union, prices are constantly being lowered to all the members of the union. Newmarket would get the advantage of increased power consumption, not only in Cooksville, but in Hamilton, in Toronto, or in Windsor.

The people of Newmarket will surely have more sense than to repeat the mistake that the people of Brantford and Hamilton have already repeated of.

Hon. E. J. Davis strongly recommended the ratepayers to vote for the bylaw which will place Newmarket in the power of the company which his government, when in office, endowed with a franchise which prevents hydro power being sold at even cheaper rates than it is. Mr. Davis has always been with the corporations against the people, and when he recommends the people to vote for the corporation against themselves he is giving advice which every self-respecting Newmarket man will feel bound to reject.

PITY 'TIS, 'TIS TRUE.

The Telegram is really very funny. "The World," it declares, "is an object of pity, rather than of anger in the coarse, clumsy, stupid, untruthfulness of an utterance that ignores the unanswerable evidence of the following division list in the private bills committee." And then The Telegram quotes the division list, which, as we stated, in what The Telegram calls "coarse, clumsy, stupid, untruthfulness," placed the purchase of the Toronto Electric Light Co. under the provisions of the act of 1911. For The Telegram's purpose this may be coarse, clumsy, and stupid. Anything that disagrees with The Telegram is subject to such classification.

With the exception of this separation of the Toronto Electric Light purchase from the Street Railway purchase, no change was made in the bill as Mr. McNaught brought it into committee, and when that change was made, the committee was unanimous in reporting the bill, and Hon. Adam Beck declared he was perfectly satisfied with it.

Mr. McNaught certainly voted against separating the vote on two questions that are tied together, and must be accepted together or not at all. Everybody understands that. And when the two questions are voted on together and carried under the two acts, the effect will be exactly the same as if they had been voted on and carried under a single act. Hon. Mr. Beck explained in committee that it would be better to follow the precedent already set, and have two acts. But the provisions introduced by Mr. McNaught for safeguarding the city, the hydro-electric and the power union were accepted by everybody.

We have taken for granted that the two purchases will be voted on and carried, and perhaps we have as good grounds for expecting this as The Telegram has for hoping to defeat the extinction of the two franchises. The business men of the city are favorably disposed towards it; the Hydro-Electric Commission will pronounce upon its desirability; the negotiators know that it is useless to submit an unfavorable agreement; they are sanguine apparently that a favorable one is possible; the ratepayers are unlikely to reject a favorable agreement. Still, in the view of The Telegram, the World is an object of pity rather than anger. We trust it will stick to pity and not give way to the grosser emotion. We would regret to see The Telegram descending to anything coarse or clumsy or stupid. It would be so alien to its usual kind, gentle ways. And it would be such a bad example for the Two Tommies.

he presented the latest statistics relating to its trade, banking, manufactures, railways, public debt and other affairs. The figures are surprising when it is remembered that Victoria is the smallest state of the commonwealth, with an area of only 87,884 square miles and a population of about 1,350,000. This little British community has a debt of roundly $300,000,000, an amount which on the surface looks like a heavy incumbrance until the real facts are disclosed.

Victoria's borrowings represent mainly investments in land, public works and public services, all reproductive undertakings. Railways absorbed $220,000,000, water supply works $45,000,000, estates for closer settlement $18,800,000, the other coal mine $715,000 and other public works and buildings $18,600,000. Last year the net earnings of the state investments, he meant the net receipts after paying all working expenses, pensions, and providing for replacement, totaled $16,565,000, while the interest on the debt was $10,240,000, thus leaving a surplus of $255,000 which was passed into revenue. This meant, he commented, that Victoria had practically no public debt.

Regarding the public debt itself the figures are no less instructive. But of the total amount of $300,000,000 only $186,000,000 is held in Britain, the balance being held in Victoria itself. During the last seven years only one loan of $7,500,000 had been raised in London for the construction of railways and water supply works. In the same period, over $42,500,000 of British indebtedness had been liquidated by moneys raised in Melbourne, so that as a net result in 1912 the Victorian loans outstanding in London had been reduced by $35,000,000. Not only this, but local raisings during the last seven years totalled $43,750,000, showing a total of $86,250,000 which the little Victorian community had given the government for new works and the repayment of old loans abroad. Victoria and its premier have reason to be proud of this record.

SCOTTISH HOME RULE.

Home rule for Scotland has been to some extent an academic question. This not because the majority of the Scottish people were not in favor of the principle, but because no very serious violation of the rights secured by the treaty of union has yet occurred. Nevertheless, the progress of Scotland, particularly with regard to educational affairs and land law improvement, has been held back because the predominant partner in the United Kingdom was not prepared for any advance and feared that a precedent set for Scotland might be made the ground for a demand that England fall into line.

No argument in reason can be advanced why the Scottish people should not manage their own affairs and regulate their own legislation. At the time of the union the idea of a federation between individual sovereign states for common purposes while protecting state rights was unknown. The union brought advantages to both kingdoms, but not so much to either as would have happened had the distinction, well established now between particular and common concerns, been recognized and protected. No country the world over is better able to govern itself than is Scotland, and with a free hand the land of the thistle would blaze a pathway for the nations.

LITTLE TO ASK.

An effort is being made to raise $50,000 for the superannuation fund of the diocese of Toronto for the purpose of placing the older clergymen of the Church of England in a position to retire as soon as they might reasonably be expected to be released from duty. Many who have grown gray in the service of the church are unable on account of the very slender rewards of their labors to give way to younger, more active, and abler men.

SEEING THE GAME.

When the grandstand and the bleachers fill with yelling human creatures when the umpire starts his umpiring and the batter grabs his bat, when the players take their places on the old familiar bases and a big stemwinding southpaw starts his antics on the mat, then a happy time's before us, and we join the sounding chorus, and then we rise and rend the welkin with a vengeance in praise of the pleasure, but for happiness past measure there is nothing that can touch it in our estimate of joy; there is no life so well worth living as an A-1 vacant knothole to a healthy-minded boy. Oh, the minister and doctor and the breakfast food connoisseur and the lawyer and the merchant may infest the baseball park; the butcher and the baker and the solemn undertaker may pay to gain admission where their cares forget to cark. They may lose their whoops and chorals when they've passed its happy portals, they may shout in wild abandon till their lungs are full of rents, but for really worthwhile grinning let me watch the home team winning thru a happy youngster's peepers at a knothole in the fence.

Fritz, J. Jeffs and Green—L. E. Avey (Hamilton) for plaintiff. G. H. Sedgewick for defendants. Motion by plaintiff for order striking out third paragraph of statement of defence, and especially certain words, as being likely to prejudice the jury against him. Judgment: It is at all times difficult to strike out part of a pleading. It is especially undesirable to interfere with a statement of defence. The conduct of the plaintiff on the occasion complained of would seem to be very material to the defence, if it can be proved. In any case it must be left to the trial judge to say if evidence given on this matter. The plaintiff so far from being in any way put at a disadvantage by the statement of defence is now made aware exactly of what his defendant relies on to escape liability. In fifth paragraph, by an obvious error, defendant asks to have action dismissed as against him without costs. If necessary this should be amended. The motion will then be dismissed with costs in the cause.

Martyn v. Coates—Chitty (Du Ver-net & Co.), for defendant, obtained on strike out order changing venue from Toronto to Whitby. Costs in cause.

Charlebois v. Sullivan—Wright (Millar & Co.), for plaintiff, obtained attaching order, returnable second of June, and order for substitutional service of same on debtor.

Bruce v. National Trust Co.—S. G. Crowell, for defendants, moved for order setting aside statement of claim. C. M. Garvey for plaintiff. Reserved.

Phillips v. Lawson—C. A. Moss, for defendants other than A. B., moved for leave to amend their statement of defence and that plaintiff may be required to elect against which of the four defendants he will proceed, or to strike out the name of defendant J. B. best. J. P. MacGregor for plaintiff. Judgment: Plaintiff to amend statement of claim as he may be advised declaring against which defendant he is proceeding. Statements of defence should not be amended until statement of claim has been amended. Defendants to be at liberty to amend in eight days thereafter. Costs to plaintiff in the cause. Pleadings and other proceedings may be had in vacation at the will of either party.

Warren v. Forst. Warren v. Hilborn—F. Arnold, K.C., for plaintiffs in each action, obtained order for issue of concurrent writs and for service on defendant out of jurisdiction.
