PUBLIC AMUSEMENTS

Viola Allen at the Alexandra. Mr. Louis N. Parker, who has written many daintily attractive things for the stage, new turns to a love re In which there are many clashings of steel, wars and rumors of wars, the ringing blow of the mailed fist, the clang of the battle-horses' hoofs, and the brave deeds of fair women. For subject, Mr. Parker has gone to the fertile field of Coventry, well remem-bered for its favorite legend of the Lady Godiva, who, to save her towns-people, rode naked thru the streets. Mr. Parker has taken this legend and drawn from it a story dealing with Countess Dorothea of Coventry, or, as the Saxons called her, Godica—or God's sift. This countess, to be played by Miss Viola Allen, is the central figure in "The Lady of Coventry," a woman with an infinite capacity for lovins, and the good fortune to see her affec-tions worthily bestowed. On Monday next Miss Allen and company will present the new play at the Royal Alexandra, continuing the remainder of the week. Liebler & Co. have provided Miss Allen with an ex-cellent company, and an elaborate and artistic production. the brave deeds of fair women. For

Louis Mann at the Princess.

Louis Mann at the Princess. Altho Louis Mann does not utilize a dialect in his new play, "Elevating a Husband," the character of Charles Sample, which he plays, has such a distinct individuality that it stands out as a most realistic creation. Sample is a young man brought up on the east side of New York City. Despite his illiteracy he is a shrewd business man, and wins financial success." His wife, whose love, and perhaps, unconsciously to herself, her ambitions, have blinded her to his crudity. dis-overs that increasing success has made no particular change in har hus-hand, and to "polish" him becomes her great aim. The husband is willing to be "elevated" if it will please his wife. The process is hudicrously funny, and only partially successful. The cli-max comes when "the other man" comes into the plot. In portraying the role of Sample, Mr. Mann runs the gamut of emotions, from uproarious comedy to the most tragic pathos. Sample is said to be the actor's greatest stage creation. "Ele-vating a husband" will be seen at the Princess Theatre all next week. Mr. Nann has an excellent company of supporting players, including Emily Thurston at the Grand. Thurston at the Grand. Thurston, upon whose young shoul-ders Keilar so graciously threw the "mantle of magic" on his retirement from public life four years ago, will make his annual visit to the Grand next week with a program of new and starting mysteries that will re-echo the praise that followed him last sea-son. This season Thurston will offer among his many new mysteries four remarkable creations. "The Spirit among his many new mysteries four remarkable creations, "The Spirit Paintings," "The Phantom Plano," "The Indian Rope, Trick," and last season's censation, "The Great Abbott-Detroit '30' Auto Mystery." His performance will prove a rare evening of enjoyment, substantiating the pre-diction of Kellar, who claimed that urston would be the greatest magician the world has ever known. At the Saturday matinee special features will be introduced for the delight of the children, with whom Thurston is a great favorite.

The special feature for the week will be Taylor Granville's "Hold Up," a romance of the southwest. This is a notable scenic and mechanical produc tion. Included in next week's bill are Nonette, Sam J. Curtis & Co., Salerno. Cocoran and Dixon, the Robert du Mont Co., and the kinetograph.

"The Midnight Maidens."

"Come, take a trip on my Pull-man car," is the invitation extended to the patrons of the popular Gayety Theatre next week. "The Midnight Maidens" invite you to be their guests. "On Their Honey-They will start moon." A fully-equipped Pullman car can be seen running at full speed over the Rocky Mountains, overflow-ing with beautiful, frolicsome maidens. Fun, music and pretty girls never were blended to better advantage than in this play of Gus Hill's selection. "The Village Fire Brigade" will also find a place in the evening's entertainment. This is a pantomime of swift and endless fun.

"The Ducklings" at the Star. The road to happiness leads toward the Star Theatre, where the Ducklings Burlesquers play next week. Imperial Russian Ballet.

Local music lovers and theatregoers are congratulating themselves on the good fortune that is theirs in the ap-proaching brief visit of the All-Star Imperial Russian Ballet. This most brilliant aggregation of Russia's dancing artistry was brought to America largely thru the influence of the directors of the Metropolitan Opera House, New York. It is sent across the country by special arrangement with these directors. Mr. Vittorio
