BODY POLITIC AND BODY CORPO-RATE.

That The Globe has begun to enquire into the origin of political evil is an encouraging sign; but we are afraid it is looking in the wrong place. It is true of course, that all the faults of politicians may be traced back to human imperfection, but human imperfection has always been with us and we can hardly hope to get rid of it in our time. Burke summarized a similar explanation in this way, "That we have a very good ministry, but very bad people. On this hypothesis," he said, the disease appeared to be without remedy, "for we have no other materials to work upon, but those out of which God has been pleased to form the inhabitants of this island. If these be radically and essentially vicious, all that can be said is that those men are very unhappy, to whose fortune or duty it falls to administer the affairs of this untoward people."

The Globe might find a more hopeful field for reforming work in the relations of newspapers and political parties with wealthy corporations. It presents itself an illustration of a newspaper under corporate influence, and there is a string of such newspapers running from Halifax to Vancouver.
These corporations also corrupt politics by their contributions to the campaign funds of both parties, and by their lobbying and other forms of manipulation of parliament.

The Globe complains that certain politicians speak at the notion of combining religion with politics. Its own conduct is calculated to create a powerful prejudice against such a combination. One day it prints a sermon on righteousness, the moral ills of the body politic, the crying need of angular characters, and the next day it explores the defence of some shady transaction of the Ross government.
Who can help suspecting sermons preached in such a pulp? The people of this country are not irreligious, and we are confident that they would gladly welcome a real union of politics and religion, for religion is a healthy element in the body politic, and it is not religion, but a pretence of religion combined with essentially immoral methods, that makes cynics of honest electors.

From a newspaper making such professions as The Globe, the people had a right to expect something better than its grossly partisan treatment of the Garnett-Stratton case. Its explanation of Mr. Stratton's "can't you forget some things," was less mischievous than some of its other exploits, because it was so obviously absurd; but its preaching can hardly be expected to be influential under such circumstances.

The partisanship which leads to such exhibitions as these may be able to get rid of. But the influence of the corporations has aggravated and corrupted party spirit. It works in an insidious way. Its effects are perceived in gifts of valuable franchises, in legislation against the public interest, and in the expenditure of campaign funds, but its methods and workings are sometimes difficult to discover. Yet we think that if The Globe will give its earnest attention to this field of reform, it will accomplish more than by any number of homilies on the general depravity of the human race, including that body of readers whom it has been educating for nearly 60 years. The relations of the Body Politic and the Body Corporate will form a very interesting field of study.

BRITISH-CANADIAN TRADE.

Harold Cox, secretary of the Golden Club, has written a leaflet with the object of proving that the Canadian preferential tariff is useless to Great Britain, and therefore that Great Britain should make no return for it. Mr.
Cox contends that American and French imports into Canada have increased more rapidly than British imports. The pamphlet is not very friendly to this country, but there is one set of figures that we may find instructive.
The exports of home products of Great Britain were divided as follows: To foreign countries 63 per cent; to the British East Indies 14 per cent; to Australasia 9 per cent; to Canada 3 per cent; to British South Africa 6 per cent, and to other British possessions 4 per cent.

The fact that Canada, in spite of its preference, makes so small a showing is due to two facts, and to the progress of manufacturing industry in Canada.
Proximity and similarity of conditions give the United States a great advantage as against other countries, and we should hardly expect to find agricultural implements, wagons, furniture, stoves or refrigerators imported from any country except the United States.
When we do not import them from that country we make them ourselves.
In fact, the rivalry of the United States strange things within.

Elephants Help to Work.
Those who were at the scene this morning witnessed another interesting feature, the unloading of a circus and menagerie done on scientific principles and with the same economy of long trailing, sleeping with the rule of the water L. Main shows, not a harsh word was spoken to the horses—not an oath uttered. The latter is considered almost a crime in the light of this admirably-systemed aggregation.

The four six and eight teams of horses were wheeled into line alongside the cars at a gesture from the wizards who directed them. The horses were fairly started. This was a scene outside of the regular program and well
