THE EVENING TIMES, ST. JOHN, N. B., MONDAY, JULY 16, 1906.

GORDON

Packard's Special Combination

"That's it, Alderney. Good cast, sir!"

"All, hence the marquise," murmured with exceeding accuracy.

"The strairs, and a woman of her position might be trusted to sum up a stranger tic regurgitation. I have warned him re-yak." (Anglice, oak.) "An' he wur a clever owd bird, too. He knew sommat about everythink. One day he chaffed me wi' more ways o' hocussing spirits than I'd ivver heard tell of afore. Gosh! he med me roar."

And Jones showed how he roared.
"Amother time," he went on, after regaining his breath; "his lo'dshap walked around my bit o' garden, an' he nearly skeered me into a fit. By gum! he said as how honey could be poteoned by bees feedin' on rhodydendrums and henbane or water dropwart mistaken for parsnips. As for mushrooms, he called 'em sike neams I've nivver had one i' t' house since."

back and glared up as More than once had he frightened away possible competitors by similar tactics. There was nothing else for it; Lester must speak openly.

"I was going to tell you," he said with cold distinctness, "that Lord Arneliffe's heart failure was not due to natural causes. It arose from the administration of ansenic in one of its many forms. Lord Arneliffe has been poisoned!"

CHAPTER II.

Dr. Smalley had concluded an examination on his own part. Then he touched the village doctor's arm.

"Will you oblige me by coming into the corridor a moment?" he asked.

"There's nothing—" began the other stiffly.

"Exactly. I only wish a word in private with you."

"Exactly I only wish a word in private with remaining as nails, tent as a bit o' seasoned in Quebec.

"There's nothing—" began the other stiffly.

"Exactly I only wish a word in private with remaining the war a hundred. He war as nails, tent as a bit o' seasoned in Quebec.
