of Arundel and Surrey, only son of the Duke of Norfolk, occurred this morning at Arundel Castle, Sussex.

Philip Joseph Mary, Earl of Arundel and Surrey, was born Sept. 7, 1879, deaf, dumb, blind and otherwise physically imperfect, causing intense grief to one of the proudest ducal houses of England. This sorrow and disappointment finally caused the death of the child's mother, the countess leaving the duke to the task of watching over an imbecile heir. All that wealth could command, all that scientific treatment and earnest prayer could accomplish was brought to bear upon the afflicted child, and, after the lapse of 20 years of darkness and semi-idiocy, the young carl, it is said, recovered to a great extent sight, intelligence and physical strength. The progress was slow and unhoped for and everybody was astonished by the wonderful improvement, the great change in his general appearance and his interest in what was going on around him. This change began about five years ago, and was still going on when death intervened to destroy the hope of his immediate family and friends. A joint meeting of the treasury board and members of the municipal council was held Thursday afternoon for consideration of the city's indebtedness to the county in uncollected taxes assessed for county

Aldermen Christie, Bullock, Stackhouse and McMulkin, City Chamberlain Sandall and Councillors Lowell, Lee and Ruddick and Auditor Magilton were present. Councillor Lowell said the residents of the county were complaining of the amount of arrears owed to the county by the city. In the city he had known of an execution being issued for arrears of 30 cents and he wondered why city people who owed much more to the county were not prosecuted.

Alderman Robinson said the chamberlain was exerting every effort to collect taxes in arrears.

Councillor Leee asked the chamberlain for the amount of collectable arrears appearing on his books as due the county.

The chamberlain said the amount would be about $45,000, but that every year he paid as much money to the county treas-urer as the whole county revenue from other sources. The 5 per cent. allowed as a discount must be deducted from this.

Councillor Lee quoted from the auditor's report for 1900 showing that from 1872 to 1900 the indebtedness of the city to the county was $88,000th Chamberlain Sandall claimed that the report was incorrect.

After much more discussion Alderman Robinson summed up the grievance of the county members by saying that Councillor Lowell thought the city authorities are not pushing the collection of taxes as are the county members are personally because the county authorities. the county authorities. Personally he thought Chamberlain Sandall was doing all possible and he asked the councillors for suggestions as how to secure larger collections.

Councillor Lowell asked if the chamberlain had issued executions for all who appear on the books to be in arrears.

The chamberlain replied that executions had issued for all where he had a legal right to take such measures.

No decision was reached before the meeting adjourned but the county members will meet again before Tuesday's council meeting and will prepare a report.
