

same, all manner of People, of what Quality or Condition soever they may be, are hereby strictly forbid to undertake, attempt, or innovate any thing contrary thereunto, upon the Penalty of being severely Punished, as Disturbers of the Publick Peace. Given at Varfaille the 8th day of December, 1696. Signed

Lewis,

And lower, Philypeaux.

The most Christian King's Letter to the Archbishop of Paris, to cause Te Deum to be Sung for the Peace Concluded with Savoy, &c.

Cousin,

AS in this War which I have alone sustain'd for these Nine Years past against the Confederated Force of Europe, I had no other Aim than to Defend Religion, and Vindicate the Majesty of Kings: God has protected his own Cause, he has Guided my Designs, and Assisted my Enterprises. The happy Successes which have accompanied my Arms, have been the more agreeable to me: because I have always Flatter'd my self they would Conduce to a Peace; and I have made no other Profit of those Successes, than to offer my Enemies Conditions more Advantagious then they could hope for, even tho' they had obtain'd that Superiority