

Women, Strategy re:

An unusual feature of the New Year's honors this year has been the number of Canadian women chosen for distinction. Here again service has been recognized.

Whatever be one's opinions regarding royal honors with or without titles for Canadians, the most outstanding feature of the long list of those recently named was, to most people no doubt, the large number of women selected for distinction in this manner.

Titles have been restored, but Mr. Bennett deemed it prudent and politic to cover his flouting of public opinion with a bevy of petticoats. A reversal of the policy of 1919 would get by better if disguised in women's clothes.
