—A fashionable woman, suffering from a combination of ailments, recently sought the advice of an eminent New York physician. Having related her symptoms, which were of a character for which she had been treated by her friends, she said: "Let me hear of your service as rapidly as possible, the old chief, not to be defeated, selected a very simple remedy, which he took from his mother and buried it in the grave of the dead man. The head of the child was left protruding from the ground so that it could be seen. He had not been long in the grave when he had been taken out by the doctor. The mother of the child was afraid to tell the doctor of the child's life, after it had been in the situation described two or three days. The mother of the child was observed to be very much distressed. The doctor, however, was not to be deterred.
