NO. 12. —
 When a newspaper offers its advertising space at a nominal figure, it is a practical admission of "no circulation."
 THE KLONDIKE NUGGET asks a good figure for its space and its justification is the fact that it is paid for by a large and loyal circulation in the city of Dawson, Yukon, and in all other parts of the Yukon Territory.

KLONDIKE NUGGET.

THE END CROWNS THE WORK.

The great fight which the Nugget, single handed and alone, has waged against the White Pass and Yukon Railroad has borne fruit. The government of Canada, recognizing the justice of the demands made by the people of Yukon through the columns of this paper, has come to the rescue and served notice upon the railroad octopus that its rates must be reduced or the operation of the road will be stopped. Such in brief is the glorious news that the Nugget is able to give its readers today. The long, weary struggle for the right has ended in success. For a period of six months without interruption and in defiance of every means of pressure that corporate power could invent or suggest, the Nugget has held steadfastly to its purpose and the victory which it announces today is full compensation for every effort that has been put forward and every sacrifice that has been made. The cause of the people has triumphed and the Nugget as the champion of the people's rights congratulates and felicitates the entire community as well as itself for the magnificent results that have accrued from the fight. Never, perhaps, in the history of journalism has the equal of this contest occurred. The campaign undertaken by this paper against the extortionate rates charged by the White Pass Railroad for the delivery of freight in Dawson has been waged against fearful odds and in the face of handicaps which seemed at first insurmountable. The active opposition of the other local newspapers had to be combatted and the powerful political influence wielded by the stockholders of the company had to be met and overcome. But not one of these obstacles proved so formidable that it could not be removed. Public opinion as voiced through the columns of the Nugget proved so strong that contemporary publications were gradually forced from the position of championing the cause of the railroad monopoly into an apathetic silence. Influential members of the government have gradually been arranged on the side of the people until pressure has become so powerful that the entire strength of the federal government has been enlisted in our behalf. With the weight of the government thrown into the balance there can be but one result. The railroad company must yield and its extortionate freight rates must come down to a fair and reasonable basis. The far reaching effects of this most notable newspaper achievement may be readily understood. It will remove the last obstacle that has stood in the way of the progress and development of this territory which henceforth will move forward at a pace that must entirely eclipse the history of all past years. The greatest drawback to the work of opening up this country has been the cost of landing supplies in this city, which cost has formed the basis upon which all mining operations have been conducted. By reason of the enormous rates charged by the railroad company for the transportation of freight

NUMEROUS MONTANAITS

Are Located in the Yukon and in Alaska.

Alfred B. Hamilton, formerly sheriff of Choteau, has returned from Alaska, where he spent three years mining. He expects to start for the north again in a day or two. He says that Montana people are at the head of pretty much everything there is in that country worth having and are kept up behind the hand wagon in minor details. Speaking of Montanans he saw in Alaska he said:

"Miss Alice McAndrews of Butte, winner of the Inter-Mountain's Paris-Nome contest, has an employment and real estate office in Dawson and is rustling quite hard. She is apparently doing well and is enjoying good health."
 "George Croft of Great Falls, is mining above Dawson. His wife and daughter lately came to Seattle."
 "Johnny Manning, an old-timer, as a very rich claim near Bluestone.

The hillside and benches along the Klondike river carrying gold in moderate quantities but not of sufficient value to warrant working under present conditions, will all be washed down and made to yield of their precious stores just as soon as the cost of working has been sufficiently reduced to make it a profitable undertaking. The Nugget again congratulates the people of Dawson and of the Yukon Territory generally upon the splendid victory which has been achieved. So far as the Nugget is concerned, it has borne its part in the struggle from a sense of duty alone. We have felt that the policy pursued by the White Pass Railroad has been an outrage upon the community and by every legitimate means within the power of this paper we have combatted that policy. The results speak for themselves and with the results we are content.

Further details are presented by the Nugget today of the proposed Dawson-Forks railroad. That enterprise has at last been undertaken in good faith and without doubt will be carried to a successful consummation. The wonder is that the same thing has not been done before. The profits which might have been realized from such a road during the past three years would amount to something

 "John Curtin, formerly of Helena, and the Chesterfield of Montana, is keeping a hardware store in Nome. His son is with him."
 "Tom Finnigan of Benton is living in Nome. He is city detective."

SIR LOUIS DAVIES' RETIREMENT.

In the appointment of Sir Louis Davies to the supreme court, the Liberal party loses one of its most prominent and staunchest champions, and the judiciary gains a man of rare ability, keen judgment and unimpeachable character. In leaving the political arena he carries with him in full measure perhaps as any public man ever did in Canada, the good wishes of one of the old school of politicians, a hard dealer of blows and one who never gave up the conflict. He was a clear and incisive speaker and had an accurate and comprehensive grasp of the affairs of the country, but the rapidity of his delivery was such that the effect of his utterances was very often lost on his audience. His vigor and brilliancy, however, earned him the title of "The Rupert of Debate" and this did not inappropriately picture his career in the house and on the platform. As minister of marine and fisheries, which department he administered from the accession to power of the Liberal party in July of 1896, he gave the fullest satisfaction to the great industry which came under his charge. During his tenure of office the fishery and marine interests of Canada were very thoroughly safeguarded, while at the same time no cause for offence was given to the Americans, who are so prone to find occasion for umbrage. The fisheries of Canada under his charge have been carefully protected, and the regulations affecting them firmly and consistently enforced. There is little doubt that he will be as great an ornament to the benches as he has been to the parliament of his country. His retirement from the political field is the first of a number which must occur during the next few years, and in which are included some of the foremost names in Canada, names which have been familiar during the last 25 years to the people of the Do-

MINNAPOLIS, OCT. 18.—EX-GOVERNOR JOHN SARGENT PILLSBURY DIED AT 2:45 THIS MORNING. HE HAD BEEN ILL FOR SOME TIME WITH BRIGHT'S DISEASE AND FOR SEVERAL DAYS HAD BEEN UNCONSCIOUS MOST OF THE TIME.

John S. Pillsbury was easily the most distinguished citizen in Minneapolis. He went to Minneapolis many years ago from New Hampshire and engaged in the wholesale and retail hardware business from which he retired with a fortune. At his invitation the late Charles A. Pillsbury, located in Minneapolis and established the great Pillsbury Flouring Mills, afterwards transferred to a British syndicate. His uncle, John S. Pillsbury, became largely interested in these mills financially, but took no active part in their management. John S. Pillsbury was three times governor of Minnesota and could have been elected to the United States senate if he would consent. Since the foundation of the state university he

TO UNDERSTAND.

No authentic statement has been made that he is suffering from ill health, nor does he keep himself secluded as he could not fail to do were any danger imminent. The fact of the matter probably is that the newspaper correspondents and the Associated Press are bound to give the public something to worry about in all and discuss, and guarded references to alleged ill health experienced by the European sovereigns and the czar, have on more than one occasion been at the point of death, according to rumors given freely in the newspapers, but they were able, notwithstanding, to perform in the regular way, and both of them at the present time are very much alive and apparently robust. King Edward has enjoyed the very best of health for a long period of years, and as he has always taken good care of himself and comes of a family remarkable for their longevity, there is no reason in the world for harboring any idea that he is not perfectly well, especially in the absence of any authoritative statement to the contrary. It would indeed be a national calamity if the king, at this time, were to die. During his long career as Prince of Wales he gave evidence of possessing qualities which admirably fitted him for the throne, and in the highest sense of the word he will be a constitutional sovereign. For the best interests of the empire therefore the hope must fill the breast of every British subject that the present ruler will have a long lease of life. —Vancouver Province.

King's Reported Ill-health. — The persistent rumors in regard to the illness of King Edward have evidently found general credence in England and the United States, and every land on the part of his majesty to refuse on the part of public function if he is present at any public function is regarded as giving confirmation to the reports. Why, however, any anxiety should be felt at this time is difficult

POSITION IS WANTED

By a Man Whom Late Order L. H. Unemployed.

To the Public: Being unable to secure a position at my profession, that of bookkeeper and accountant, at the end of the clearing-up August- and, not wishing to leave a country of such great possibilities as the Klondike to return to the outside where there are few possibilities for a struggling young man, I took a position as "booster" for a black-jack game for which I have been paid $5 per day, barely enough to furnish me with food and a place to sleep. By the first of February I can return to my former position on the creek, but having been deprived of my humble means of subsistence until that time the problem that now confronts me is: How am I to live until the first of February?

From now on for the next two months I am willing to do any kind of labor from keeping books down to porter work for $5 per day and board myself. I have had experience in all departments of mercantile work and can furnish testimonials as to my unblemished moral character; notwithstanding it is a fact that for three months past my occupation has been such that I did not care to inform my family on the outside of its nature. Should I be so fortunate I will waive all claims to compensation if I fail to render entire satisfaction. Address "B." care of Daily Nugget.

From the tone of our dispatches today it appears that the Considines will secure a favorable verdict. The power of money and influence is able to accomplish wonderful results.

Complaint has also been made of the wood supplied for the school, which it is said is water-soaked or so green that little heat can be derived from it.
