FROM THE PEOPLE

THE SECOND COMING

To the Editor of The Gleaner,
Sir,—I have read in your columns of Mr. Burtt's warning to this city of the second coming of Jesus, and that we are living in the last days. I fully agree with Mr. Burtt and those who read their Bible must know that the prophecies are about to be fulfilled.
Some of our ministers better wake up lest they be caught telling ghost stories in their churches or attending horse races or having plays in their churches, such as Bringing Up Father. Better spend time preparing to meet Jesus and warning the people of the terrible times we are living in; have lamps trimmed and burning among the wise. I believe some of our churches have blind leaders, as well as blind members. Now, we all need to pray, pray for churches that they may find a deeper faith; and by prayer we get closer to Jesus. By prayer and reading God's word we can get the grace needed for a revival such as Fredericton has never known.
Yours,
ONE IN HIS SERVICE.
Fredericton, Oct. 30, 1920.

QUESTION OF GRAMMAR

To the Editor of The Gleaner,
Sir,—A few days ago a question of grammatical construction was brought up in the People's column. Some one asked why, in the following sentence, the word "he" was in the nominative case and not in the objective case:
"The culprit proved to be he."
He is the subject, not the object of this sentence. He is what we are talking about, in the words of the school books. His being a culprit is what we say about him. Hence we have:
"He proved to be the culprit."
The subject now is in its logical place at the beginning of the sentence. The inverted word order is often used in order to lay stress on the object. In this case we desire to emphasize the fact that he is a culprit, and started our sentence with the word culprit.
Yours,
E. R. H.

SAFETY FIRST

To the Editor of The Gleaner,
Sir,—In answer to O. W.'s letter regarding the investment of his $10,000 inheritance in a partnership about which he admits he knows nothing, my thought would be not to go in on this venture. In a partnership and a marriage (they are synonymous) the main thing is to know your partner, as there are many questions that come up that might be answered in good faith by one partner and cause a lot of trouble and ill-feeling with the other on account of not understanding one another's characteristics. O. W. would surely not have chosen his wife merely on the recommendation of a friend, no matter how strong that recommendation.
In very few cases does a man succeed in a business he knows nothing about. My thought would be to invest that money in a business—or, better still, in several businesses—that are already established and competently managed. There are several ways of doing this with safety and at the same time receiving a chance to share in any future prosperity that these companies might enjoy, and this without running any of the risks that a partnership involves.
Yours,
T. O. X.
St. Stephen, N. B., Oct. 29, 1920.

JOIN THE NAVY

To the Editor of The Gleaner,
Sir,—In answer to Work and Travel, who asks in the People's column for advice about securing a position which will afford him the opportunity to travel extensively, it may be said that there are positions of the kind he wants, but they are, as a rule, filled by older men; men who are technical or scientific experts in some line.
It is rare to find a man of twenty who has such work, unless he is engaged as assistant to an older man.
Why not enlist in the navy? That is an honorable calling, full of interest to the young man, and requiring travelling on ships of war all over the world. The writer is not a recruiting sergeant, but he can think of no better opportunity to see the world, and to see it from the standpoint of a favored soldier of his country, than to join the navy.
Yours,
AN OLD MAN.
Gagetown, N. B., Oct. 30, 1920.

CHILDREN THRIVE

To the Editor of The Gleaner,
Sir,—In answer to Curious the writer, who is an ex-inspector of commissaries and food in the Panama Canal Zone, can give some real information as to conditions there.
The climate is very warm and damp the year around. It rains from 15 minutes to an hour a day for eight months and there is no rain for four months. There is no more yellow fever and very little malaria. It is bad there for any lung trouble, catarrh or rheumatism.
Most all children thrive and grow fat there and there are good schools. Women, if they are stout and healthy, usually get along fine, but if they are not they soon become thin and miserable and are advised to return home.
It all depends upon the wife's present state of health whether she should go there to live. If in good physical condition, I think it would be safe to go down there and try it for a few months. The husband will get along much better in that strip of land, if the wife is with him.
Yours,
AMOS.
