John Young has been elected for Montreal to the Canadian Parliament. In his speech he says:
When I had the houseur of soliciting your suffrages, at the last General Election, I did so as a Member of the present Administration. That Administration I now oppose; and I oppose it not only because I think it unworthy of public confidence from having failed to redeen its promises, but also because the Hon. Inspector General, the leading member of it, has notoriously been engaged in speculations some of which were of a most questionable character, and has publicly avowed the principal, that he, holding the office of first Minister of the Crown, had a right to speculate in public Lands and Stocks on his own account, the same as any other individual Against that doctrine I consider it necessary to protest, believing that if it be allowed to prevail, it will be subversive of morality in public men and fraught with danger to the best interests of the public. Nor can be about the public as a whole, be held free from blame from this cause; for, by their silence upon the point, they have given it a tacit approval, for which they must be held responsible.

By the present General Election, the constituency of Montreal, the Commercial Emporium and first eity in British North America, will have an opportunity of recording its verdict for or against the doctrine thus denounced.

The two deserters from the barracks at Sydney, who have been arrested in Boston, it appears have a fair change of escaping punishment. They were arrested on a charge of robbery, and a demand made that they should be delivered up for punishment under the terms of the Ashburton treaty. Their Council objected that their was no evidencesty convict them of robbery, legally so called,—their crime being that of larceny and desertion, neither of which were included in the provisions of the treaty mentioned. The case was deferred for further consideration, and the prisoners in the mean time were committed the barracks at Sydney and the prisoners in the mean time were committe without bail.—Eastern Cronicle
