MINARD'S LINIMENT CURES DISTEMPER.

Many Women Suffer From Pains in the Back.

When the back begins to ache it is a sure sign that there is something radically wrong with the kidneys.

"What you want is a kidney medicine. Don't's Kidney Pills are not a cure-all, but a medicine for the kidneys only."

Mrs. L. Melanson, Plympton, N.S., writes: "I am sending you this testimonial, telling you what a wonderful cure Don't's Kidney Pills made for me. For years I had suffered so with my kidneys I could hardly do my housework. I used several kinds of pills, but none of them seemed to be doing me any good. At last I was advised to try a box of Don't's Kidney Pills. When I had taken the first box I found relief. I have used five boxes and to-day I feel like a new woman. I cannot recommend them too highly."

School of Manners Needed.

By Dorothy Dix.

It is announced that the New York university is going to establish a school of manners, and that the degree of M. E.—Magister Elegantiarum—may be conferred on such students as perfect themselves in the etiquette of polite society.

This news sounds almost too good to be true. Let us hope, however, that such a course of study is really to be established in one of our great schools, and that it will be compulsory, for nothing is more sadly needed.

For whatever other charms and virtues the American young man possess, good manners are seldom among them. As a child he is almost invariably a little savage. As a hobbler he is generally a hoodlum, and as a grown man he is only too often an awkward blunderer, who is like a bull in the social china shop.

On every side we encounter multitudes of men, who have intelligence, force, power, men who have achieved success in their own particular calling, but who are as ignorant as babes of any of the graces of human intercourse.

They cannot enter or leave a room without falling over their own feet. They do not know what to say when presented to a stranger, or how either to pay or receive a compliment.

At dinner parties you may see them hopelessly floundering around among the silverware. At restaurants you may observe them with their legs twined like snakes around their chair legs, grasping their forks as if they were about to harpoon an attacking whale, and, also, you may even pass away an evening listening to them eat their soup.

Of course, we excuse such men by saying that they have been too busy with big affairs to give their attention to such small matters as the proper use of a fork or a spoon. We say that it's more important that a man's heart should be of gold than that he should wear the right sort of coat for the occasion, and we try to gloss over his boorishness by calling him a rough diamond.

All of which is sheer nonsense. Nobody will contend that a rough diamond is as valuable as one that is cut and polished, and the truth is that while a man may succeed without good manners, he would succeed better with them. To know how to do things, to possess what the French call savoir faire, is always a help, never a handicap in life.

People have always appreciated this fact so far as women were concerned. In all girls' schools special attention is paid to deportment and girls are taught the niceties of etiquette that they perhaps do not have an opportunity to learn in their own homes.

More than that, at home stress is laid on little girls behaving like ladies, and wherever you go the small daughter of the house will receive you charmingly, drop her little courtesy and endeavor to engage you in courteous conversation.

But apparently the mothers of the same families make no effort to instill politeness into their boys, and the lads will storm into the room with their caps on. They will never stop to speak to the visitors, and only grant by way of reply when addressed.

And when these boys are sent off to school no effort seems to be made to supplement their lack of home training in manners. They are grounded in all the arts and sciences except the most important art and science of all, which is that of making oneself agreeable to one's fellow creatures.

For, when all is said and done, good manners will carry one further than anything else in the world. They are a letter of credit that every one of us honors at sight. The clown may compel our grudging respect, but what shall I give those who present our hearts as a free gift to the courtier.

A young man may be of the Forest-Nuovo, A. D. 1274, on his most sterling worth, and yet wear a decollete collar that exposes his Adam's apple and a coat and trousers and waistcoat of different makes and colors so that he looks like an animated patchwork quilt, but if he and another youth who knew how to dress applied for the same job the good clothes would get it.

A man might be a genius and yet eat peas with his knife, but he would have a hard time getting close enough to those who might help him to get a chance to show what he could do.

A man may have almost super-human ability in any line, but if he is rude and crude in his manners, if he does not know how to please, he lives and dies neglected.

On the other hand, the man who has what we call a charming personality, who is gracious in speech and polite in manners, finds a helping hand always at his elbow and a friendly shoulder ready to boost him up the ladder.

That is why it is so important to teach boys good manners and why the opening of such a department in the New York university is epoch making.

Chapel Building in China

Rev. J. Aelen, E. F. M., who is one of our regular correspondents, tells us about the need of chapels in his district of Nellore. He is a candidate for donations to this end, and explains why:

"It is impossible to keep our converts unless we have a little chapel, which is for them the center of their religion. Moreover, on account of the heat, it is impossible for the priest to stop for several days in a native hut or in a tent. Unless there is a chapel, it is so extremely difficult to visit the villages regularly and to administer the Sacraments. Even in the smallest village a heathen temple is to be found. It may be small and uninspiring, but there it is. And our Christians are not satisfied till they, too, have their temple.

When we begin work in a village, we usually erect a shed of bamboo and palmyra leaves. Such chapels last only a few years, and every year they have to be repaired, because often the leaves are blown away by the breeze. Sometimes we built the walls of mud, but the difficulty remains, as there is no end to the repairing; and, though the outlay is not so expensive, it proves to be more expensive in the long run, on account of all these repairs. A chapel built with stones or brick, and covered with native tiles will stand for years, and I will relieve me of the necessity of constant repairs."

Patron Saints For Girls.

How beautiful are the names, how sweet and winsome the characters of those saints usually selected as patrons for Catholic girls! First and foremost comes Mary, the spotless Mother of Our Redeemer, who spent the greater part of her life in Christ's company. Every child is dear to her for the sake of her Son; and she will exercise all a mother's care and thought, all a mother's loving interests and watchfulness in favour of these little ones dedicated to her and called by her sweet name. One would fancy that a Catholic parent need never be uneasy about a child consecrated to the Blessed Virgin, so powerful in her name to uplift and to inspire and to sanctify. After the Mother of God come the virgins and matrons of the Church, Brigid, the Mary of the Gael, Catherine, and Agnes, Lucy and Agatha, Margaret and Elizabeth, whose lives were devoted to the glory of God and the service of men. How glad parents ought to be to have such models to propose to their children! How consoled that these mighty patrons who forever stand before Our Father, Who is in heaven, feel an interest in their little girls, and exercise a protection over them!

St. Thomas Aquinas.

St. Thomas was born of noble parents at Aquino in Italy, A. D. 1226. At the age of nineteen he received the Dominican habit at Naples, where he was studying. Seized by his brothers on his way to Paris, he suffered a two years' captivity in their castle at Rocca-Secca, but neither the carcases of his mother and sisters nor the threats and stratagems of his brothers could shake him in his vocation. Having at length escaped, he went to Cologne to study under Blessed Albert the Great, and after that to Paris, where he taught for many years philosophy and theology. The Church has ever venerated his numerous writings as a treasure-house of sacred doctrine, while in naming him the Angelic Doctor she has indicated that his science is more divine than human. The rarest gifts of intellect were combined in him with the tenderest piety. Prayer, he said, had taught him more than study. His singular devotion to the Blessed Sacrament shone forth in the office and hymns for Corpus Christi, which he composed. To the words miraculously uttered by a surgeon at Naples, "Well has thou written concerning Me, Thomas; what shall I give thee as a reward?" he replied, "Nought save Thyself, O Lord." He died at

Interesting Facts About Our Popes.

The Pope need not be an Italian. All Catholic Americans hope there will some day be an American citizen elected Pope.

The Pope need not be the most learned man in the Church. It is possible that many priests, Bishops, Archbishops and Cardinals are more highly educated than he.

The Pope need not be the most saintly man in the Church. It is possible for many millions of persons, in every part of the world, to be just as holy, or even holier than the Pope.

Not every Pope has been a canonized saint, although great numbers of them have been distinguished for their saintly lives. Thirty consecutive Popes were martyrs, giving up their lives rather than betray their high trust.

Out of the 260 odd Popes, who reigned for 1900 years, in the most difficult situation in the world, you can count on the fingers of one hand the Popes who have failed to live up to their exalted place as the Chief Shepherds of Christendom.

The Pope is the Bishop of Rome, but he can leave Rome if he desires, retaining all the while the Bishopric of Rome. That was the Episcopal see of St. Peter as the Bishop of Rome.
