

Two Cases of Eczema and How They Were Cured.

Further Proof That Dr. Chase's Ointment is a Positive Cure for Chronic Eczema.

If you read these letters you will find that Dr. Chase's Ointment is not to be classed among ordinary salves and ointments.

By actually curing itching, stinging eczema in many thousands of cases it has stood the most severe test to which any ointment can be put.

Mr. J. Brice, Temperance road, Parry Sound, Ont., writes: "Just a line to praise Dr. Chase's Ointment for what it has done for my wife. She has been suffering with eczema in her head for two years, and has spent no end of money with doctors and for ointments, which did her no good. She had about given up hope of ever being cured, when someone told her to try Dr. Chase's Ointment. By the use of this Ointment the trouble has left her entirely, so we have unbounded faith in it. I have told several people about the Ointment."

Mrs. W. G. Dowden, Greenspond, Bonavista Bay, Nfld., writes: "I suffered with eczema on my hands, and for eighteen months was so bad that I could not use a needle to sew or do anything. I could scarcely dress myself. Though I had lots of salves from doctors, I could never get much benefit from them. Then I sent for a sample of Dr. Chase's Ointment, and found it very different in action. It was not long before my hands began to heal, and four 60c. boxes made them well. I cannot praise Dr. Chase's Ointment too highly, and frequently give some to others to get them using it, for I know that it will cure."

In the home Dr. Chase's Ointment is of almost daily usefulness, for by relieving chafing and irritation of the skin it prevents eczema and similar itching skin diseases. Applied to all cuts and wounds, it prevents blood poisoning and heals the skin. Dr. Chase's Ointment, 50 cents a box, all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Ltd., Toronto.

"The Die is Cast For Better or For Worse."

CHAPTER IX.

What was the barrier; what was it that separated him from Miss Lyndhurst—from herself she almost felt? For the other girl had very nearly faded from her consciousness, and it almost seemed as if Lashmore was pelating to her, Kittie.

"I've got to tell you," he said, as if in response to her slight movement, "but I don't know how to do so; for at every word I say, you'll think worse of me, you'll find it harder to forgive me. The fact is—"

His voice broke, and he paused; then he forced himself to go on. "I told you my name was Lashmore, Harry Lashmore. It isn't."

Kittie started slightly, and turned her face toward him; but he was looking straight before him, and seemed ashamed to meet her gaze; and Kittie, with a quiver of fear at the risk of discovery which she had run, turned her head away again. "I have no right to that name—or any other," he said, almost inaudibly. "Do you understand?"

"My father and mother were not married," he said hoarsely. "I'm just an outcast, a man without a name, without any standing in the world. I've scarcely a right to live. It's an insult for me to thrust myself into any decent society, to know decent people; it's worse than an insult for me to tell any woman, the commonest, the humblest in the world, that I love her. And that's what I did to you."

There was silence. Kittie was not so ignorant of the world as she had known it, or books that described it, not to realize the position in which he stood. The farce had indeed turned to tragedy. Curiosity had been placed in her bosom, to a nobler emotion, perhaps the noblest which woman can feel—pity. Her heart was wrung with pity for this man, so richly endowed with youth and strength and health, with a noble presence, a form and face which few of her sex could regard with coldness and yet cursed by a bann which nothing could remove.

The pity welled up in her heart and filled her eyes with tears. Now she thought of Eva, and confusedly wondered what that other girl would do if she were sitting here in Kittie's place and listening to the broken words, the hoarse, strained voice, in every note of which spoke a strong man's agony. Would she turn away from him scornfully, with bitter words of reproach and contempt? What would she, Kittie, do in Eva and they've made fools of themselves. I've got to live, more's the pity. But I felt that I couldn't live, actually live, without telling you the whole truth and without getting your forgiveness. I felt that that look in your face, in your eyes, would haunt me till I die. I felt that if I didn't get your forgiveness, I shouldn't be able to go on, life wouldn't be worth living."

He paused a moment. "I'm glad I've told you all this. I couldn't tell it to any other living being. I mean, the story of my birth. In coming here, in telling you, I hadn't any intention of getting your pity. I don't want that. I just want your forgiveness; I want you to think of me as not quite a scoundrel. To put it shortly, I want you to forgive me, Eva."

Kittie wanted, longed, to say "I forgive you"; but she was afraid to speak, lest her voice should undo all that her resemblance to Eva Lyndhurst's figure had done.

Lashmore drew a long breath. "I suppose you're afraid to say so lest I should continue to worry you," he said bitterly. "You needn't have any such fear. I am going away; I'm going to leave England forever, I hope. I shall never see you again; you will never be distressed by the sight of me. Can't you bring yourself to try and say 'I forgive you'?"

Kittie moistened her lips and endeavored to still the throbbing of her heart. She got possession of her voice at last.

"Where—where are you going?" she asked, wondering whether he would detect her by her voice. She held her breath in the pause before he answered. To her surprise and immense relief, he did not start to his feet with an exclamation. Her voice must as closely resemble Miss Eva Lyndhurst's as did her face and form.

"I am going to South America," he said. "I met a man, by a kind of miracle, who has offered me employment. The name of the place is Quirapata."

"Quirapata—" she murmured. "I'll write it down for you. I haven't any hope that you'll write to me, that you want to have anything to do with me from now on; but that's the place."

He tore a page from his pocket-book, wrote on it and held it out to her. Kittie's small, shapely hand, very white from her illness, stole slowly out from her cape and took the paper. He watched the hand with an intense interest, with something that was scarcely hope glowing in his eyes.

"It's a long way off," he said with a half-bitter laugh. "I am not likely to trouble you again; it is scarcely probable that we shall ever meet; because you see, I shall stay there. No one will know me, be likely to guess my secret over there. I shall vanish, be swallowed up. That's all right, and as it should be. I shall welcome the chance of losing myself, of cutting adrift from England and any one who might recognize and know me; but I can't do so unless I feel that I have put myself straight with you. Eva, will you forgive me? That is just what I want to know; I want to take your forgiveness with me, to comfort me, to make me feel less of a mother! Your child isn't naturally cross and peevish. See if tongue is coated; this is a sure sign its little stomach, liver and bowels need a cleansing at once.

When listless, pale, feverish, full of cold, breath bad, throat sore, doesn't eat, sleep or act naturally, has stomach-ache, diarrhoea, remember, a gentle liver and bowels cleansing should always be the first treatment given.

Nothing equals "California Syrup of Figs" for children's ills; give a teaspoonful, and in a few hours all the foul waste, sour bile and fermenting food which is clogged in the bowels passes out of the system, and you have a well and playful child again. All children love this harmless, delicious "fruit laxative," and it never fails to effect a good "inside" cleansing. Directions for babies, children of all ages and grown-ups are plainly on the bottle.

Keep it handy in your home. A little given to-day saves a sick child to-morrow, but get the genuine. Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," then look and see that it is made by the California Fig Syrup Co."

and a hound than I feel now." He leaned forward; he was so near to Kittie that she could feel his breath on that part of her face which the hood did not conceal. She knew that he was waiting with a feverish longing for her response; that to him her answer was all important, that its import meant more than a transient ease of mind, but a lifelong solace. If Eva Lyndhurst sat where she sat, felt as she felt, what would she say? Kittie thrust the question away from her, with a mental impatience. Her hand stole from under the cloak and was extended to him; and in liquid tones, liquid, but deep and penetrating, full of pity and something more wonderful than pity, she breathed, almost inaudibly:

"I forgive you."

Lashmore caught her hand and sprang to his feet. He held her hand in both of his and bent over her downcast head in a frenzy of gratitude, a madness of passion.

"You forgive me!" he exclaimed, not loudly, but in so low a voice that she could scarcely hear it. "You forgive me! I don't deserve it! I don't deserve it! What can I say—how can I thank you? You have lifted a load from my heart, have sent me on again. What an angel of goodness you are! You have forgiven me! It scarcely seems true. Ah, you don't understand how much it means to me. I feel like the condemned wretch who has received a pardon which he doesn't deserve. I feel like—Oh, I can't tell you. But you may be able to guess. Eva, you know I love you. I would give the world if I had it to have the right to woo you, to try and make you love me in return. But that's impossible, I know," he added despairingly.

Scarcely knowing what she was saying, obeying the impulse of her heart, moved beyond herself by the torrent of his passion, Kittie, forgetting all cautions, turned her pale face to him and whispered:

"Why?"

Tea is Still Advancing But We Intend to Protect Our Customers as Long as Possible

We notice the Canadian Press expresses the opinion that good tea may soon be a dollar a pound. This may appear rather pessimistic but it is not impossible, as at the moment there are a variety of reasons which contribute towards considerable advances in the price of tea.

We are to-day offering a MAGNIFICENT TEA in 1 lb. packets only, at

50c. per lb.

This is better than many teas offering at 60c. per pound, and on to-day's market quotations should be selling at 70c. per pound. This tea is being used by many of the best families in the city and has gained many encomiums.

We are also offering a SPLENDID TEA at

45c. per lb.

Both of these teas are specially put up by ourselves and are better value than can be obtained anywhere.

We shall be forced to advance our prices later or reduce the quality and we would sooner advance the price than reduce the quality. A word to the wise is sufficient.

Patriotic Children

In aid of the fund for Convalescent Soldiers Sailors Home, a concert is being given by several patriotic little girls at place at Victoria Hall on next afternoon at 3.30. The program will be most attractive and interesting and the young performers are preparing earnestly. Candy, cake and will be on sale during the concert. It is hoped that the mothers, who are Misses Marshall (2) and Bruce will do their utmost that measure of success which their efforts merit.

THE MEXICAN MIDDLE. The Mexican middle is a condition of what happens to a man when it tries to get along without red shooshine and the bathhouse.

The trouble with Mexico is that it lacks refinement, education, manners and castile soap. People have traveled in Mexico and seen very little soap is imported from Mexico, as the average Mexican is familiar with its use and does not adopt new-fangled ideas. That the first bar of soap ever brought into Mexico was introduced by President Diaz, who after one expedition fell off thirty pounds and issued a royal edict making penitentiary offense to use soap but a crash towel during the bathing season.

Another cause of the Mexican middle is the shortage of school teachers. It is difficult for us in this country, so liberally sprinkled with plump, pugacious school teachers conceive of a vast republic with our very back door and door of hopeful school teachers who are ways getting married in the condition the Mexican people are in ignorance, squalor and sordid, without knowing where Shakespeare wrote Shakespeare or where Shakespeare wrote Shakespeare or where Shakespeare wrote Shakespeare or where Shakespeare wrote Shakespeare.

At this writing, it looks as if Mexican middle would be straightened out until a large number of the native peons have been sent to a hospital grave. It is impossible to appeal to the other side of a sea-jawed Mexican who drinks out of the soup bowl and eats custard pie with a knife. It is a painful and expensive business to fine the Mexican peon who where he will prefer to remain home and die of old age, but his antics have their drawbacks.
