BOARDERS.

BY EDWARD SULLIVAN. Naturally, my dear, a body meets with many singular people in the course of keeping boarders; I think the queerest folks the Lord ever chose to make have come and boarded with me, since Mr. Johnson left me with three little children to earn my living by the most ungrateful task ever was put upon a woman's shoulders; for there are people that never think that you can do enough for 'em, and people that haven't any consideration for your feelings, and if a turkey happens to be tough, ask if it was ever known for cer. tain what became of the pair that went into Neah's ark, and the like of that, you know; and there are people that have whim, and want raw meat, or scorched cinders, and people that can't bear anything fried, and people who won't touch pork, and people that take airs and won't pay, and people that are so far from being what they pretend to be that you have to mention to them that their rooms are wanted, and all sorts of people, who do all sorts of queer things.

One of the queerest things I ever knew to be done by any boarder was done, I must say, by Mr. Dinkie.

He came to board with me above five alter your opinion of one who will ever remember you."

must say, by Mr. Dinkie.

He came to board with me above five years ago, just at Christmas time. He was a bachelor, fifty years old, I should judge, and his face was smooth-shaved, and he wore a mahogany-colored wig, and he was rather particular in his dress, He'd just met with a disappointment—not in Then he was off. "He ain't such a

She had three pets—a dog with curly wool, and a kitten all white except a black nose, and a green and red parrot. Daytimes she had them in her room, but she hired an extra room for them, and they slept in that and it was for them, and they slept in that, and it was comical to see them. Poll in her cage, and the dog and kitten each in a sort of basket-cradle, with refreshments set for em in case they should be hungry in the night.

Everybody isn't so careful of children.

She had white quilted covers for the two animals. It was peculiar, and she was curious in a good many things.

She wasn't very handsome, but she was of a very good family, and though she wanted extras she paid for 'em. I remember she in the she wanted extras she paid for 'em.

a good deal on the parlor sofa. Sometimes, too, he used to see her to church and to lactures; and no matter how she acted afterward, I have my eyes about me, and I noticed she used to fix herself up very smart indeed, of evenings, after he came.

Then he came and asked me how much I reckoned she had a year. And she asked me how much I reckoned she had a year. And she asked me hat I calculated he owed. I told him that I'd heard she had ten thousand dollars interest of her money, and I told her what he had, and how he got it. I couldn't tell what she thought, but I made up my mind that there'd be a match between 'em, for I've always noticed that the more a lady (talks against the gentlemen, the more apt she, is to have the first one that makes her an offer. come into the pan—when I heard Miss Swiffles come into the parlor, and about three minutes after, Mr. Dinkie he came in.

I'd like to remark just here, that far from me be listening. I'm above it; but I wasn't called upon to go away, and I couldn't help hearing, and this is what I did hear. "Miss Swiffles," said Mr. Dinkie, "I am rejoiced to find you alone."

"Ah!" said Miss Swiffles. "I have long wished such an city," said Mr. Dinkie, "Indeed!" said Miss Swiffles.

"You can guess why?" asked Mr. Din-'No, sir, I can't," said Miss Swiffles. "Is this the coquetry of your sex?" asked Mr. Dinkie. "Have you not seen that I adore you?"

"No," said Miss Swiffles. "I have hidden my emotions better than I supposed I could," said Mr. Dinkie.
"My dear Miss Swiffles, here on my knees and beg you to accept them and the life-

"Adorable creature," said Mr. Dinkie,
"you put the question I would have asked into the most concise form."

"I'll put the answer into the same form," said Miss Swiffles. "No." You cannot ask me to relinquish my hopes at once," said Mr. Dinkie, "May ask why you are not disposed to consider my proposition? Will you not consider it, and answer it more at leisure?"

But why?" said Mr. Dinkie. "Well, if you want to know why," said Miss Swiffler, "because I like to be my own mistress. I have plenty of money, as you know, and three charming pets, who are worth more than any six men I ever met. I didn't marry when I was a ever met. I didn't marry when I was a good-looking young girl, because even then I couldn't be sure any man wanted me and not my property; and now I'm an ugly old woman. I shan't throw myself into the arms of the first fortune hunter that has calculated an old maid will marry anyone who asks her. You waited for dead men's shoes twenty years, I understand. Now probably you wish to wait for mine. That's why I say 'No,' Mr. Dinkie."

Next thing I heard was the door slam. Mr. Dinkie had gone, and Miss Swiftles was laughing to herself on the sofa.

I couldn't help it. I just peeked into the window, and says I, "Hurrah, Miss Swiftles, three cheers. It was as good as a play."

"'Tisn't the first man I've served so," said Miss Swiftles, rubbing her nose. "Oh, said Miss Swiftles, rubbing her nose."

"A field of some "There States".

said Miss Swifles, rubbing her nose. "Oh, they are a mean set, these men," and away she walked, with her diamonds glittering.

Truly yours. BENJANIN DINKIE.

Of course I agreed, and when I saw Mi-Swiffles she said the man had a bette temper than she thought. And so that very evening weall walked into Mr. Dinkie's room. He had had the bedstead putaway, and hired an extension table. And there was Mr. Dinkie and a dark complexional configurations and two waiters. plexioned gentleman, and two waiters.

Mr. Dinkie did the honors beautifully.

At 12 o'clock Mr. Dinkie arose.
"Ladies and gentlemen," he said, "the time for parting has come. I must be on board the steamer in two hours. Mosler, the same obligation lies on you. We part perhaps forever. Adleu."
He shook hands all around. When he came to Miss Swiffles he gave her a little note.

"Mr. Dinkie," said Miss Swiffles, "we all do wrong sometimes. Probably I was mistaken in you. I wish you a very pleas-he was rather particular in his dress. He'd just met with a disappointment—not in love, mind you, but in money.

He had made himself a slave to a rich old uncle for twenty years, expecting to be his heir; put up with all sorts of treatment; been huffed, scolded and sneered at, morning, noon and night; never said a word; just gone on grinning and rubbing his hands, and speaking about his "dear uncle," until the old man died, when he left him only five hundred dollars a year for his life. After that he came to board with me.

There was boarding with me at the same time a maiden lady named Swiffles. She was about as old as Mr. Dinkie, and she was severy rich. She wore diamonds in her ears so big and so shiny that I wonder the thieves let her come home alive with 'em the love of the strength of the burglar?"

She is uch a bad fellow, after all,"

Said Mr. Robers.

"No, he ain't, said I.

Miss Swiffles went up stairs very slowly.

I saw her wipe a tear away as she went, and I stopped to put out the hall lamp. I had done it and bolted the front door, when all of a sudden the house was filled with shrieks. It was Miss Swiffles voice I knew, and she was screaming for help.

"She's found a burglar in her room to murder her for her diamonds at last." I said to myself, and away I rushed and up came all the boarders, and we stood in the room where she stood, holding a letter in her hand, and shrieking like mad.

"Oh! where is he?" I asked. "Where's the burglar?"

"He's told her he'd commit suicide on her account," I said. "Oh, dear! Oh, dear!"

"Oh! I'm so ill," cried Miss Swiffles—"so ill! Open the window! I'm poisoned. Oh! "Poisoned!" says I. "Oh! oh! oh!"

I remember asking her once why she hadn't married, and she said she always felt that the male sex was beneath her, and that she couldn't promise to obey any of 'em. She asked me if I didn't feel to despise 'em myself, and I said some of 'em I did, and some again I didn't.

She had written a lecture, I think, for the purpose of putting 'em down, and she vas a-going to deliver it in my parlor one night; only I says to her, says I, "Miss Awiffles," says I, "I'm only a poor widow, lepending on my boarders for a living; and as most of 'em are of the male sex, it might give 'em offience to tell all 'em was all true. Jay-Eye-see's Nose Out of Joint. From the Chicago Mail.
"J. I. Case," said a Wisconsin man who sat in Broker Schwartz's office, "has a little grandson now who has altogether supplanted the famous Jay-Eye-See in the gruff millionaire's big heart." When the millionaire's youngest daughter lost her heart it went into the possession of a young fellow who had no money, and who had simply a mode:ate place in the office of the Racine plow works. "Oh, yes, take her if you want. You don't get anything with her, though, mind that: not a d—d penny," was the answer which the suitor got when he asked the old man's consent. There was only a modern't suitor got when he asked the old man's consent. There was only a modest wedding, and then the couple moved into a little cottage rented by the husband. "Give 'em a house? No. Let 'em hustle," was the way the old man met a plea from the girl's mother. "Didn't we have to hustle, eh? Are they any better nus?" The old man went along and spent thousands on his famous gelding. The young couple moved along in a humdrum way like scores of other modest couples in young couple moved along in a humdrum way like scores of other modest couples in Racine. The young man "hustled;" got around every day; paid his debts promptly, and saved a little money. Then came a little youngster—a boy. Rough old Case got around to see it; got around oftener after that. He used to dance the boy on his knee.

his knee, "Whatcher going to call him?" he blurted out one day.

"We thought we'd name him after his grandpa," said the pretty, young mother.

"Sea here, young fellow," said the rough man of money, who started life as a black-smith, "here is $100,000 for you. I'll start you in business."

So now the old man dances his grandson on his knees, the young man hustles on his own account, the young mother looks prettier than ever, and Jay-Eye-See's nose is completely broken.

INTERCOLONIAL RAILWAY The Great Canadian Route to and from the Ocean for Speed, Comfort and Safety is unsurpassed.

Pullman palace day and sleeping cars on all brough express trains. Good dining rooms at onvenient distances. No custom house ex-Pullman cars leaving Montreal on Monday, Wednesday and Friday run through to Halifax, and on Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday to St. John, N.B., without change. Passengers from all points in Canada and Western States to Great Britain and the Continent should take this route, as hundreds of miles of winter navigation are thereby avoided. Importers and Exporters Will find it advantageous to use this route, as it is the quickest in point of time and the rates are as low as by any other. Through freight is forwarded by fast special trains, and experience has proved the Inter-colonial route to be the quickest for European freight to and from all points in Canada and the Western States.
