A Couple of Terrible Examples, The Mail was once upon a time an in fluential newspaper. It was the recognized such enjoyed an honored and profitable reputation. But the manager of the paper was possessed of a fatal weakness. falsely estimated his own importance. He felt that he had in his hands a weapon that was able to deal a staggering blow to Sir John Macdonald and the Conservative party. He allowed his head to get swelled with this idea. One day he used his weapon against the party. It didn't work as anticipated. The weapon failed to injure the party, even in the slightest degree. It rebounded and struck the man that fired it fairly between the eyes. That's why The Mail is now going through life in such a dazed kind of a way. This episode accounts for the disaster that hovers around and about The Mail newspaper and The Mail building. It accounts for a big mortgage and weekly deficits. We cite these facts to show the folly of even a newspaper, with a paper mill behind it, attempting to wreck a political party.

D'Alton McCarthy ought to have pro fited by this exposition of folly on the part of The Mail's director. When The Mail wasn't able to wreck the party, how could McCarthy expect to do it? It was a foolish moment when Mr. McCarthy made up his mind to get even with Sir John Thompson by trying to sow the seeds of discord in the Conservative party. Mr. McCarthy is fast realizing that he has made the biggest mistake of his life. When he was a member of the Conservative party in good standing people had a high opinion of him. He was regarded as one of the powers behind the throne. Under the shelter of the Conservative party D'Alton McCarthy enjoyed a high reputation among both Conservatives and Reformers. But, throws upon the host in the content of the weak pepts, the weak pepts, which is a high character, because plain within the publicide on the most possible fiched Macdonald.
