WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 21st, 1896 g per cally come to a cognize their useful n se and importance are now secking to im ress the public with a just conception of the roll and their claims upon a superantu a ton toud when they shall have become to trachers has just been held in Truco and the ten perhaps most important questions des cus ed were summer schools of science and superaubustion of teachers. Many were is fa or of superannuation, while not a few, in rulling some inspectors, were very pro I is said teaching is made a stepping store to other professions and the majority of so who remain in the school room all their days are second rate men who could tring more than a modicum of intelligence : hence, it is argued that the best men are seduced f on the teaching profession by the hope of greater reward to be won at some more congenial sort of labor. That the conclusion is true in part no one will deny, but neither will any one accept it in toto for the Many men who begin life as teachers even tually fit themselves for some other work, and it is well for the scholar the change of em layment is sought, for the teaching proextended to every one to come in, but they do not all stay. Many are called but f w are chosen. Some most excellent students. who were the ornaments of their classes, are i nominious faitures when placed in the in structor's chair. Is it then any wonder tha these talented youths should seek more sui: able unploymen? If a person, after a fair trial, finds that he does not like teaching he should at once cease from his labors as a teacher and prepare for something else. Then those who have no capacity to teac: and those who have no liking for teaching very properly leave the profession, and leav ing it, why should they not go on to some thing higher? They are not and never were in the true sense of the term, teachers; they failed in their first effort to discover what nature has fitted them for, and now to their honor be it said they try something elsa This elimination of those who never can be good teachers leaves yet in the ranks a thire class who are the salt of their profession viz, those who have a capacity for teaching and like their work. Now, indeed, is the public misfortune great if the members o this class leave the ranks, for in them is our only hope of a thorough system of teaching. But such a charge cannot be sustained, and this fact is the complete refutation of the statement that our best men soon ceast-traching and strive for something higher." And pray, what is this "something higher" that is always placed in juxtaposition to the teacher's desk and yet appears at the same time to be magnificent in its superiority when contrasted with the highly honorable work of the teacher? Is it theology, or only hope of a thorough system of teaching work of the teacher? Is it theology, or | record, 2.11. cine, or law, or philosophy? Surely not, for the successful men in these professions are but the creatures of the teacher. The teacher is the mighty powers in the land to day. The product of his labor is seen on all hands in the intellectual life of our country. The school teacher is not a third-rate man nor is he doing a third rate third-rate man nor is he doing a third rate work. The trouble is not because men want to leave the work for something else, but they meet in solemn convention and resolve,—first, we don't get pay enough; second, that others who once were teachers are now profitably employed otherwise; and third, we are therefore only third rate men and are paid accordingly. This is what it amounts to. The public look to the teacher to create his own status, and if he chooses to take precedence after less worthy labors he should blame himself. The teacher should be well paid during the time of his service and he will require no superannuation. There is considerable melody in that word superannuation and it is harmonious to the ear, but it will prove a delusion and a suare to the teacher and a positive injury to the public.

being and farming and the business of general merchants and traders. This arrangement concentrates the energy and capital which has hitherto failed to produce the most califactory results financially to those est satisfactory results financially to those who have been engaged in the business. When have been engaged in the business. There can be livile doubt about the ultimate success of this scheme, if carefully managed, and the present indications are that it is in the hands of men of practicel business experience. For several years past Mr. Whitman, whose name has been closely connected with many business ventures in this county, has been engaged in drying fish by a process which he has had patented and will no doubt being his matured business ability to bear on the new venture with success. There is the new venture with success. There is nty for the new company to do and the effect of their operations should be to stimulate the fisherman to greater activity by ersating a market for the produce of the mighty deep near at home from which the prepared article may go forth to the consumer.

ACCIDENTALLY SHOT AT BIRTLE, MANITOBA.

Word was received here a few days ago by relatives of our former townsmap, Mr. James I. Foster, for some years past residing at Birtle, Man., conveying the psinful intelligence that his four year-old sun Franklin, B. Foster had been a cident ally and faculty shot by another lad, sgd 16 years, at whose nome the little fellow was in the habit of visiting from day to day. Just after the unfortunate lad had partaken of his dimerhe were over to his neighbors, where there are a nun-ber of children in the family, and on discovering a loaded gun in the corner of the room proceeded to lay hold of it, when one of the boys took up the gun for the purpose of drawing the charge. In some accidental manner the gun was discharged, the contents striking the visitor in the lower part of the face, and causing instant death. Only fifteen minutes had elapsed from the time of the youths departure from home tilm is lifeless remains were conveyed back to be parents, whose heart broken feelings can be better imagined than described. Mr. and Mrs. Foster have the heart? It sympathy of heir triends in the vicinity in which they eside, and we feel assured that their many relatives and friends in this county will learn f their sad bereavement with the deepest sorrow and regret.

James Morton, Esq., of Middleton, Passes Over to the Great Majority.

On Monday morning last the people of Middleton were deeply shooked at learning of the sudden death of James Morton, Eq., which had just taken place. He had eaten his breakfast apparently in his usual good nead hand had gone out about his work as usual. Suddenly, while in the act of grinding an axe, he fell over and expired almost instantly.

Mr. Morton was one of the best known and most highly respected residents of the satern part of this county. He was the where of a fine farm just a little east of Midleton, upon which he spent his entire life. He was a good neighbor, a kind friend, and the poor and the wayfarer ever found a welsome at his door, and were hospitably intertained. Honorable and upright in all finis ways, Mr. Morton's kindly presence and cordial greeting will be greatly missed the leaves a widow and one son, Roble Moron, Eq., who will have the sympathy of a wide circle of friends in this, their sudden bereavement. Mr. Morton was about 78 years of age.
