basket, of course, in each instance. However we were too hungry to think of the way the lunch looked, and we mutually agreed that it were far better to have our biscuits soaked in water than in brandy. After lunch we directed our course away from the river, and took the overland route, thereby saving ourselves many mishaps and a deal of profanity. We did not tarry long in St. Croix, but soon left for the station, where we re-embarked for home, arriving completely tired out, and mentally resolved never to go back again.

COMMUNICATIONS.

In this column we propose to publish communications from individuals, or from the different sections, with reference to the cause. We would be glad to hear from all our friends.

Mr. Editor:—I enclose the following, hoping that it may advance our common cause by inducing others to follow the example of the person mentioned. Something like a year ago, an engineer was discharged from the Government Railway for indulging in strong drink. He sought and found employment with a gentleman who engaged him under the conditions that he would reform. The man joined a Temperance Society and kept his pledge. Not many months after this his employer gave up business and left for other parts. This man then sought for employment on the Government Works again. Upon applying he was asked the question whether he was a temperance man. He replied that he was, and produced a certificate to show his membership. After inquiring into the matter, the superintendent was satisfied as to his principles, and reinstated him in his place, where he is receiving the respect due to a man who has striven to do right. Examples like the above should induce others to follow in the same course. Trusting that the Trumpet will long be so and advancing the good cause.

I remain yours truly,

FID L.T.V.
