REAL ROBBERY.

From the columns of the Liverpool Catholic Times and other English newspapers, we see that the Socialists have become very active in agitating their doctrines in publications of every sort and in public meetings, especially of working men. It is a simple matter to show how erroneous are the principles asserted and the measures advocated for the bringing about of the socialistic millenium. "The State has no authority to interfere further with the natural rights of its subject," argues a writer in the London Tablet. "It was instituted to protect those rights, and if it infringes them it acts tyrannically and unjustly. Private property is one of the rights which the State was instituted to defend. As Leo XIII said: 'The right to possess private property is derived from nature, not from man; and the State has the right to control its use in the interests of the public good alone, but by no means to absorb it altogether. The State
