

also have substantial numbers. Quakers, Mennonites and Hutterites are small but cohesive religious communities (the Hutterites form farming communes, employing modern farming methods, while adhering to the ancient ways in all other aspects of their lifestyle). The Jewish religion is the oldest and largest of the non-Christian groups. Congregations of Eastern religions are found in the large metropolitan areas.