

Being a foreign-owned company can be a drawback in attracting staff.
Voortman believes that its inability to attract the highest calibre people, because it was a new and unknown overseas company, slowed initial growth.