

THAILAND

The fisheries and aquaculture industries are particularly important for Thailand. In 1992, Thailand imported fish and fish products which totalled approximately $870 million (US$). Major species imported were tuna, skipjack, salmon, shrimp, prawn and mackerel. Most of the imported tuna, skipjack and salmon was imported for the purpose of canning and was then exported to other markets.

Apart from importing for the purpose of canning, market potential does exist for fresh salmon, trout and other seafood products. Although the market size is presently small, Thailand is considered to be a growing market in the importation of fish products.
