

ond flag the government wants to impose on us. Those two flags have brought about all the confusion we are now witnessing in this country.

The government, in its desire to please both ethnic groups in our country, did just the opposite, that is it managed to set both factions one against the other with speeches such as those we have heard from the Conservatives.

If two flags and two national anthems are imposed, do we want parliament to accept, without knowing it, that from then on, our country will consist of two associate states? If such is the case, we should know about it so that, in the next parliament, we could see here representatives of each of those different states, and we should consider at once an amendment to our Canadian constitution and an acknowledgement of the respective rights of each of those two states.

I believe, Mr. Speaker, that hon. members will accept our amendment and that we will not hear anything more about this second flag if, really, it is not in the government's mind to recognize, by that very fact, two associate states in Canada.

Now, if parliament votes against this amendment, it will mean that it advocates, in this country, two associate states, and the responsible people will actually be those who are now in office.
