

tion. The Southerners are handsome, impulsive, and intellectual, but they lack that moral and physical stamina and energy that is the natural heritage of the sons of the north.

Before concluding, let me remind the reader that each of the several counties of New Brunswick still possess large tracts of very fine land, quite equal to the best in Victoria, and equally well adapted for extensive settlements.

Extracted from Dundee Advertiser.

Feeling convinced of the great importance of this social movement, we have lost no time in obtaining such information as may prove interesting to many of our readers, both in Kincardineshire and in other parts of Scotland.

[Here follows a full description of the objects and benefits of the colonisation scheme.]

Extracted from the St. John (New Brunswick) Telegraph.

The Kincardineshire Colonists will, on their arrival, get such a hearty welcome as will do their hearts good, such as they never had before, and which they will never forget.
