

The remains both of Lord Nelson and the Duke of Wellington lie in the crypt, the one encased in a coffin made out of the main-mast of the L'Orient, and the other in a large porphyry sarcophagus. There is something very impressive in the deep tones of the great organ as they roll away in waves of sound through the lofty aisles.

king's bonds for £60,000 into a fire of spicewood. Charles I. was feasted here in 1641; Charles II. was nine times entertained, and from 1660, with only three exceptions, all the sovereigns have dined at Guildhall on the Lord Mayor's day after their accession or coronation.

It was here that Richard III.

INTERIOR OF ST. PAUL'S CATHEDRAL.

At the end of King Street, Cheapside, is the Town Hall of the City of London, known as Guildhall. In its great room are held the inauguration dinners of the Lord Mayor, a ceremony which has been continued since 1501. It will contain between six and seven thousand persons. Here Whittington entertained Henry V. and his queen, when he threw the attempted to beguile the assembled citizens into an approval of his resumption, and it was here that Ann Askew was tried for heresy before Bishop Bonner, and condemned to be burned at the stake in Smithfield. The Earl of Surrey was tried and convicted of treason, and Lady Jane Grey and her husband were also tried and condemned here. After the abdication of