Why the United States came in.
In a sense, the United States is less interested in this subject than the other nations here assembled. With her great territory and her extensive sea borders, it is less likely that the United States should suffer from the attack of enemies than that other nations should suffer. For it is a very deep and genuine ardor—for the society of nations is not an order springing out of fear or apprehension, but an ardor springing out of the ideals which have come in the consciousness of this war.

"In coming into this war the United States never for a moment thought that she was intervening in the politics of Europe, or the politics of Asia, or the politics of any part of the world. Her thought was that all the world had now become conscious that there was a single cause of justice and of liberty for men of every kind and place.
Therefore, the United States should feel that its part in this war should be played in vain if there ensued upon it abortive European settlements. It would feel that it could not take part in guaranteeing those European settlements unless that guarantee involved the continuous superintendence of the peace of the world by the associated nations of the world.
Must Be Vital Thing.
Therefore, it seems to me that we must concern our best judgment in making this league of nations a vital thing—a thing sometimes called into life to meet an emergency—but always functioning in watchful aid to the peace of the world.

"Gentlemen, the select classes of mankind are no longer the governors of mankind. The fortunes of mankind are now in the hands of the plain people of the whole world. Satisfy them and you have satisfied the world; for their confidence, but have established peace. "You can imagine, I dare say, the sentiments and the purposes of the United States support this great project for a league of nations. We regard it as the keynote of the whole, which expressed our purposes and ideals in this war and which the associated nations have accepted as the basis of a settlement.
"If we return to the United States without having made every effort in our power to realize this program, we should return to meet the merited scorn of our fellow-citizens. For they are a body that constitute a democracy. They expect their leaders to speak for them, to represent them to be their servants.
"We have no choice but to obey the mandate. But it is with the greatest enthusiasm and pleasure that we accept that mandate. And because this is the keynote of the whole, we have pledged our every effort to it, as we have to every item of the fabric. We would not dare debate a single item of the program which constitutes our instructions; we would not dare to compromise upon any matter as the champion of this thing—the peace of the world, this attitude of justice, this principle that we are the masters of no people; but are here to see that every people in the world shall choose its own masters and govern its own destinies, not as we wish, but as they wish.

the very foundations of this war are swept away. Those foundations were the private choice of a small coterie of civil rulers and military staffs. Those foundations were the aggression of great powers upon the small. Those foundations were the holding together of empires of unwilling subjects by the duress of arms. Those foundations were the power of small bodies of men to wield their will and use mankind as pawns in a game.

"And nothing less than the emancipation of the world from these things will accomplish peace.
"You can see that the representatives of the United States are, therefore, never put to the embarrassment of choosing a way of expediency, because they have laid down before them the unalterable lines of principles. And, thank God, these lines have been accepted as the line is not settlements by all the high-minded men who have had to do with the beginning of this great business.
Those men came into the war after it was known, as I feel confident it will be known, that we have adopted the principle of the league of nations, and upon every hardy I am merely saying in effective action, we shall by that single thing, have lifted a great part of the load of anxiety from the hearts of men everywhere.
Stand in Peculiar Cause.
"We stand in a peculiar cause. As I go about the streets here I see everywhere the American uniform. Those men came into the war after we had uttered our purpose. They came as crusaders, not merely to win a war, but to win a cause. And I am responsible to them, for it fails to me to formulate the purpose for which I asked them to fight, and I like them, must be a crusader for these things, whatever it costs. I am merely saying, it is necessary to do in honor to accomplish the object for which they fought.
"I have been glad to find from day to day that there is no question of our standing alone in this matter, for there are champions of this cause upon every hand. I am merely saying, stand in this order that you may understand why, perhaps, it fell to us, who are disengaged from the politics of this great continent, to stand in this order, that this was the keystone of the arch, and why it occurred to the generous mind of our president to call upon me to oppose the resolutions, it is because we alone represent this idea, but because its privilege to associate ourselves with you in representing it.
"I have only tried in what I have said to give you the foundations of the enthusiasm which is within us for this thing, for those foundations spring, it seems to me, from all the ancient wrongs and sympathies of mankind, and the very pulse of the world seems to beat at the fullest in the enterprise."
At the conclusion of the reading of a translation of President Wilson's speech, Premier Lloyd George said: "I have only tried in what I have said to give you the foundations of the enthusiasm which is within us for this thing, for those foundations spring, it seems to me, from all the ancient wrongs and sympathies of mankind, and the very pulse of the world seems to beat at the fullest in the enterprise."
Lloyd George Supports Wilson.
After the noble speech of the American president, I feel that no observations are needed in this war. It is this resolution, to the conference, and I should not have intervened at all had it not been that I wish to state how emphatically the people of the British Empire are behind this proposal.
"And if the national leaders have not been able during the last five years to devote as much time to this thing, it is because their time and their energy have been absorbed in the exigencies of a terrible struggle.
"Had there been the slightest doubt in my mind as to the wisdom of this scheme, it would have vanished before the irresistible force of the British Empire. I witnessed last Sunday. I visited a region which but a few years ago was one of the fairest in the world. I saw a scene of devastation that no indemnity can ever repair—one of the beautiful things of the world disfigured and defaced beyond repair.
"And one of the cruellest features to my mind was what I could see had happened—that Frenchmen who love their land almost beyond any nation, in order to establish the justice of their cause, had to assist the cruel enemy in demolishing their homes. I felt that these are the results—only part of the results.
"Had I been there three months ago I would have been coming home, that I dare not describe. But I saw acres of graves of the fallen. And these were the results of the only methods, the only organized methods, that civilized nations had ever attempted or established to settle disputes among men and children. And my feeling was: surely it is time that a saner plan for settling disputes between peoples ought to be established than this one of extermination.
"I don't know whether this will succeed. But if we attempt it, the attempt will be a success, and for that reason I second the proposal."
Resolution Adopted.
The Italian premier, Vittorio Orlando, followed Mr. Lloyd George. He declared that no people were readier to accept the league of nations than the Italian people.
Leon Bourgeois, the veteran French supporter of the league of nations, followed Mr. Lloyd George. He declared that no people were readier to accept the league of nations than the French people.
"Without any doubt," responded Mr. Clemenceau.
The Chinese delegates added their support to the resolution, saying that China associated herself in the league of nations. The Polish delegates and Camille Huysmans, head of the Belgian delegation, added their strong approval.
"Is there any objection to the resolution?" asked Mr. Clemenceau. There been rightly placed, the procedure of a tribunal to the trial of these offences; fifth, any other matters cognate or ancillary to the above which may arise in the course of the inquiry and which the commission finds it useful and relevant to take into consideration.

The draft of another resolution to go before the conference regarding international control of ports, waterways and railways, reads:
That a commission composed of two representatives from the five great powers, and five to be appointed to enquire and report upon the international regime for ports, waterways and railways.

NATIONS SHOULD SHUN BOLSHEVICK ASSASSINS
Paris, Jan. 26.—Gen. Giuseppe Garibaldi, grandson of the famous Italian patriot, passed thru Paris today on his way to Italy after having given up command of the Italian division on the French front. He is taking advantage of the decree which allows all volunteers to return home, and is going back to civil life.
"The most important question to my mind at present is that of Russia," Gen. Garibaldi said to the Associated Press. "The peace conference is committing an error in trying to get into touch with the Bolshevik people. People who put murder, rape, incendiarism and robbery into the form of government do not deserve that their methods should be granted even the recognition of an offer to discuss with them. There is only one way to save Russia from itself and the world from the spread of revolutionary sentiment—that is by a military expedition into Russia itself."

Red Shield Drive in Brantford Exceeds Objective by Big Margin
Brantford, Ont., Jan. 25.—The "Red Shield Drive" for the Salvation Army's military work was brought to a close today, when a house-to-house canvass was made. It is expected that nearly $6000 will be received, bringing the total of the campaign to over $16,000, the objective was but $10,000. This evening a gathering of rejoicing was held in the Y.M.C.A., led by Col. Chandler of Toronto.

Germany to Use Berne Congress To Influence Peace Conference
Paris, Jan. 26.—The German Government attaches considerable importance to the approaching Berne Socialist conference, says The Journal de Zurich correspondent, because it hopes to use it to influence the decisions of the peace conference.
