M.O.H. RETALIATES ON CORONER YOUNG

Should Not Allow Dirty Habit of Kissing Bible—Morgue Sanitary.

Dr. C. J. Hastings, M.O.H., has retaliated on Coroner Dr. W. A. Young in connection with his complaint about plumbing at the morgue and his request that a new Bible be provided in his court.

"As regards the condition of the plumbing," said the M.O.H., "I find that this report is based on the sweating of some water pipes. Inasmuch as we have no control whatever over the elements, I am afraid that we cannot prevent this condition existing. When there is excessive humidity in the atmosphere, Dr. Young, if he is at all observant, must have noticed that such sweating does occur."

"There is no unsanitary condition at the morgue as regards the plumbing. It was more than surprised on reading the press report to learn that Coroner Young is still adopting the filthy unsanitary custom in the court over which he has jurisdiction of having those kissing evidence kiss the Bible. This has been prohibited by the department as a menace to public health and a means of transmitting disease. It is really an antiquated custom and the police court have done away with it long time."

"I sincerely trust"—and the M.O.H. smiled—"now that we have drawn the coroner's attention to this serious menace to public health, that he will take this as a warning and do away with this unhealthful, antiquated and behind-the-times custom."
