ENLIGHTENING THE LONDONERS.

British Columbia Must Not Be Omitted From the List. The following letter appeared in a recent issue of the London Times.

Sir, In an article upon Herr Schmeisser's report on the gold deposits of Western Australia, published in today's issue of the Times, you say: "Nor is Western Australia the only British possession recently added to the gold-producing districts of the world."

The value of the Indian gold mines, which was not much thought of five years ago, has been fully recognized now, and may I be permitted to suggest that in this connection the name of British Columbia might have been mentioned? It is a British possession, large amounts of gold have been exported from it, and there are many old miners who believe that it will prove to be the richest mineral country in the world.

Since the first rush, it is said, gold has been taken out of the country, without reckoning the gold dust and nuggets exported by the host of Chinamen who are constantly being worked, but who do not report their results. The greater part of this was obtained by surface washing, and the several workings of the Rocky mountains had been traversed by the Canadian Pacific railway and the Columbia river, with its gold and silver-bearing neighborhood served by branch lines and steamships, it is impossible, of course, to transport the heavy machinery necessary in some kinds of mining to any distance through such mountainous country.

All this has been changed and hydraulic machinery, drills, etc., are going into the Cariboo country, and the gold-bearing plants in the south. Cariboo is not, of course, a recent addition to the gold-producing districts of the world, but the success of the machinery used in the construction of the Canadian Pacific railway gives it more or less in the same category with other parts of the province, and the millions taken out of it by scratching the gravel along the streams is only an indication of the wealth that will be obtained from hydraulic work, deep diggings, etc.

The first results obtained from enterprises which have recently been started show that the mass of gold has been safely away from the operations of the surface workers. The history of the district, which has already been known to the Hudson's Bay Company's officials, is a gold-bearing district, but until recently it was inaccessible to the Indians and trappers. Yours obediently, MOLYNEUX ST. JOHN. Sports Club, London, April 4th. NO CINNABAR MINES. Truth discovered by Visitors to the Lake Region. Forward party, which left Ashcroft on March 23rd for the Chilcooten country on a prospecting trip in the neighborhood of the Stanley Smith cinnabar mine, returned in Thursday. Mr. Hayward said to the Journal, that in the judgment of his party there is nothing so far known of that district to justify the wild rumors which have been made there by several parties from the Chilcooten side and also from the inlet side of the range. The country is still covered in many places with snow and seems to be badly broken up in formation.
