TEACHERS' INSTITUTE. Our reporter being unable to attend the last meeting of the Northumberland Teachers' Institute, we are indebted to the World for the following summary of its proceedings.

THE 8th annual session of the Northumberland County Institute, held here this week, was largely attended, teachers coming from all over the County.

As we go to press a letter from Councillor Loggie, accompanied by his card to the ratepayers, comes to hand, and we make room for it, the Councillor being an obliging man, himself. He has been in harness for some time, in his capacity as Councillor, has given good satisfaction.

CARIBOU.—Mr. Fred. Price of the G. T. R., (now on a visit to his brother, Mr. Evan Price, chief despatcher I. C. R. here) and Mr. Neil Smith, of the I. C. R., succeeded in shooting two caribou on Tuesday last, about ten miles from Campbellton. They were on their way to what is known as "Cree's" new lake, on a fishing trip and had their guns with them, intending to shoot any partridge that they might run across. When within about two miles of the lake they espied a caribou rise from the ground, which Mr. Smith shot. They returned to Mr. Price's house, for a team to take their caribou home, and when they got back to their game they beheld lines that over their location to the position and apparent moving of the sun. Mr. Jones, by the way, illustrated on the blackboard a method of teaching this subject without a globe, and some conversational suggestions were made to Mr. London's that night and came home, returning the next day for their game. Of course all thoughts of fishing left them after such good fortune as this. There was quite an excitement in town when it became known that the boys had been so fortunate, and no end of jealousy in the consequence. The boys are proud of their success, and well they may be. They have done what none of our old hunters have been able to do. The woods are now being scoured by hunting parties, and the main topic is caribou. When the caribou came to town they were viewed by many an admiring crowd. They were really beauties. The horns of the bull were the largest ever seen, in the opinion of old veterans.—Globe.
