SMARTEST FACE NETS.

THE MARLBOROUGH AND THE PRINCESS MAUD ABE CHOSEN.

The American Duchess Wears During Her Tawis a Wonderful Breadth of Silk Fails e as, Fine as Indian Gauze, and Cooler Than Chiffon.

The philosophy of the well-dresses is to always make sure that the details of her toilet are above reproach. It is by the weil, not the h. t, she knows she is to be judged among her sisters, that a smart paraeol is of more vite l imperiance to her reputation than a new spring coat, or the quality of her little handkerchief weighs more seriously than the cut of the skirt. Accordingly she feels a vast interest in and spends considerable morey on carefully keeping up her seasen's supply of these pro'oundly necessary accessorie

They are already prominently in the market now, most especially the new summer veils that could cally set the most gifted Brazilian spiders to wondering however human beings managed to contrive so many eccenuicities in dainty woven pat-tern. Of courte, it is not in the least surprising to find at the courter where this relic of barbarism is dispensed, that the Mar.borouh and the Princess Maud are the titles given two remarkable types of

The Marlborough, presumably the tex ture of veiling worn by the American duchess on her travels, is a wonderful breadth of silk batiste, as a fine as Indian gauze, ccoler than chiffor, washable and meant as a genuine protection from rail-way dust and sea glare. It has a neat n-stitched edge and is so long that it passes around the brim of an ordinary Alpine travelling hat to tie in a bow with the ends at the back.

Women who are adopting this veil buy t in silver gray, trown, or blue, the exact color of their hats, tie the soft width about the crown as part of the millinery decoration, and pull down the kindly light shelter of the veil when it is needed.

The Princess Maud is a miraculous of finest black tulle, heavily powdered with varigated black and white silk dots, set en tirely too close together. This heavy mash also is worn with mart travelling hats, costs to less than three dellars per veil, when it is not finished with an applied edging of white k ce, and two e ara dollar covers the cost of the additional trimming

With the wide Par na hats and broad leaved rough stra s, promising to be so extensively norn this summer, huge pieces of this veling will be used, the edge falling just to the chin point and the ends gathered in a great ponpon at the back of ore's lat, Not a bit less expensive are the little French calling tissues, that are black, made of a curious cort of very open gauze, finished with a tiny scalloped edge and embroiderin flat satin dicks, no bigger than a pin head, or in strip es. Nevertheless, there are charming new veils for the sensible and economica wonen, cut frem a crisp tulle, woven in diamend-shaped meth and a little silver thread along the edges just by way of ccquettish novelty, while at the veiling counters they rell veil pins made of jet, cut steel or the costly metals and stones. This is because the veil, when properly worn, is caught by a pin exactly on the middle of the outer edge of one's lat trim. The pin is a small button-shaped affair, to hold the tulle in place and a second button-like o rnament, only very much larger holds the bow of tulle at the back.

Dumas was deep in writing a serial novel for a Paris journal, when one day the Marquis deP—called on him in a state of excitement.

"Dumas," said he, "have you composed the end of the story now being published

"Of course."
"Does the heroine die at the end?"
"Of course—dies of consumption.

"You must make her live. You must change the catastrophe."
"I can not."

"I can not."

"Yes, you must; for on your heroine's life depends my daughter's."

"Your daughter's."

"Yes; the hers all the various symptoms of consumption which you have described, and watches mountfully for every number of your novel, reacing her own late in that of your heroine. Now, if you make your heroine live, my daughter, whose imagination has been very deeply impressed, will live too. Come, a life to save is a temptation—"

"Not to be resisted."

Dunnas changed his last chapter. His heroine recovered, and was happy. About five years afterward Dunas met the Marquis at a party.

"Ah, Demas," he exclaimed, "let me introduce you to my daughter; she owes her life to you. There she is."

"That fine, handsome woman, who looks like Jenne d'Arc?"

"Yes. She is mairied, and has four children."

"And my rovel las just four editions," said Dumas, "so we are quits."

ALAP, FOR POOR NERO.

er Fitzimmons Sorely Laments the Death of Bis Lion.

Perhaps the most se ious loss that could have happened to the champion puglikt of the world. Robert Fi'zsimmons, was the untimely death of his pet lion, Noro. Like all great men, no mat'er in what walk of life you find them, Fi'zsimmons had his bobby, and that was his lion. Very appropriate it was, too, for a mar engaged in such a profession as pugilism has m ny of the traits and much of the heart possessed by the king of the forest. The champion was deeply a tached to his pet, and his sudden death will doubtless cause him many a regret. The manner of his demise has already been told, but will bear repeating. It happened in Cleveland, where Bob is ot present delighting large audiences with his quickness and prowess and came within an ace of putting an end to him also. On accoun of the oppressive heat the lion had been put upon the roof of the Rumsey gymnasium at night to get a brea'h of fresh air. Shortly after midnight on Thursday night of last week Fitzsimmons, accompan-ied by Ernest Rheber, the wrestler, and Lewis Robertsor, an attache of the gym led by Ernest Rheber, the wrestler, and Lewis Robertsor, an attache of the gymnasium, went upon the roof, Fi'zsimmons called to the lien, which, upon hearing his masters voice, pay and forward to the length of the chain and over some electric light wires. A shower of sparks quickly followed at the contact of the chain with the wires. The lion received a shock and again jumped towards Fi'zsimmons, who sprang back against the will of an adjoining building. The lion sprang past him, drawing the chain across the puglist's thighs, who cringed under the evere shock. In agony the lion leaped over the edge of the roof and bung by the neck. Fi'zsimmons was pulled from under the chain across his thigh and a small burn on the knuckle of the index finger on the right hand. That is all the visible evidence of the terrible ordea, although Fi'zsimmons was in a dazed condition for over an hour. When the lion was pulled up from the side of the bui'dir g from which he has been his cor stant companion. Many stories have been sent all over the country telling of the pair and their affection for each other. While as yet only a cub in many respects. Nero being only lourteen months old, he was a strong and heavy as if full grown, weighing over 300 pounds. His obedience to the will of his master, secured by kindness alone, was comething surprising. That the man and beat accend to be in perfest accord can be gathered from the various positions they assumed during their playful moments. Nero, in ignorance perhaps of his great strength, took no undue liberties with his master, and to see the lord of creation and king of beasts rolling around the floor frolicking together was truly an object lesson.

A Woman with a Wrench.

A quick-witted houseker pr says she has saved many a dollar in plumber's bills by buying a force-cup and learning to handle a wrench. Despite washing soda and potath, now and then comething unmeltable slips through the sink strainer and clogs the pipe. All the more modern plumbing has a nut at the bottom of the "goose-reck," just below the sink. By setting a pan beneath this, and with a wrench lcosening and then removing the cap, the obstruction will generally be found right there. Sometimes the force-cup applied over the strainer in the sink will be sufflient to c'ear the pipe without taking the cap of the goore-neck. If both fail no harm will have been done, but one or the other, or both succeeds often enough to make it worth while to exercise one's ingenuity a bit.

An Urgent Occasion.

An Urgent Occasion.

A recruit was put on sentry at the barracks at Woolwich who didn't know the exact ins and outs of the business. A good-natured chum brought lim a sand-win h from the canteen, and just as he was about to eat it, up cams the major. The sntry did not recognize him, to the major said: "What's that you are eating?" The sentry replied, "A sandwich, have a piece?" "Do you know wto I am?" ejaculated the major. The tentry said, "Perhaps the major's servint, perhaps his groom." The major: "Iry again, tentry." The sentry: "Perhaps the old chap himself." The mjor: "Right this time." The sentry: "Good heavens! hold the sandwich, sir, while I present arms."

Sharply Rebuked.

The Westminister Gezette recalls an aneofote which was once related by Canon Wilbeyforce while preaching in the Abbey: Christmas Evans, a famous Welsh preacher, had vertured to express in public his admiration for the ringing of Jenny Lind, and even to give thanks for the same. Some of the straiter members of his congregation were soandalized, and one of them called upon to mount the pulpit steps and admirister a public rebuke to the minister.

In the course of his admonition, he asked:

asked:
"Do you mean to teach that a man who should die at one of Jenny Lind's concerts would go to heaven?"
"Sir," was the instant response of Mr. Evans, "a Christ'an will go to heaven wherever he dies, but a tool remains a fool, even on the ru!pit steps."

fashion has been subjected to but few radical changes. This spring a revolution is to take place.

Here is a list of the new fashions which have already appeared in Pa.is:

The hoopskirt.

Large bustles.

Small, tight-fitting sleeves.

Hip pads in various sizes.

High heels.

Col'ars of enormous size.

Hats worn well over the forehead.

Marie Antoinette curls dangling from the back of the coiffure.

Such is the array of herrors which the fashionable woman must contemplate before planning her summer wardrobe.

"Any amusement in this town tonight?" asked the stranger. "I reckon there's goin' to be a lecture," replied the grocery man: "I've been sellin' eggs all day."

The eye of little Elsie was attracted by the sparkle of dew at early morning. "Mamma," she exclaimed, "it's hotter'a I thought it was. Look here. The grass is all covered with perspiration."

"They say," said the man of moderate means, "that disease is communicated by means of bank-bills; that germs and microbes and things get on them and are rubbed off in the handling. I don't suppose it is possible that all the germs and microbes in the world can be on the bank-bills, but if they were, why, then I could easily account for my well-nigh uniform good health."

Give Away by the Manufactur ers of Diamond Dyes.

The manufacturers of Diamond Dyes are sending their elegant full sized cabinet photo of Her majesty Queen Victoria to thousands of families on the North American continent.

The happy arrangements made with the publishers of Our Home, Canada's popular monthly paper, are as follows:

"An elegant full cabinet photo (from a recent copy taken by royal command) of Her Majesty Queen Victoria; a four-page pamphlet giving dates of births, marriages, and deaths, and other items of interesting and useful information relating to the royal family, that but few people have access to, six Diamond Dye Bolls with six extra dreases; and a card of forty-five samples of dyed cloth, showing colors of Diamond Dyes, sent free to every man, woman and child who will send in 25 cents in money or stamps for one year's subscription to Our Home, a paper that thousands declare to be worth a dollar."

This wonderful offer cannot last much longer as the stock of photos is being rapidly exhausted. Hundreds of correspondents write us about the premiums, and say the photo is well worth 50 cents.

Please note; Our Home, or one year, cabinet photo of the Queen, and other premiums, as promised above, all for 25 cents. Address Wells & Richardson Co., 200 Mountain Street, Montreal, P. Q.
