THOMAS H. HOURIHAN RUN OVER BY AN I. C. R. TRAIN

And Frightfully Mangled Wednes

Thomas H. Hourihan, a young man imployed for the past two months or so at the site of the Intercolonial improve ments in the old Harris property, met with an awful death Wednesday afternoon. He was run over by a working dismembered and instantly killed.

The site of the new elevator being olaced by the L C, R, just north of the Union depot is a rocky one and much blasting and cutting is necessary before the ground will all be in proper condition for the use to which it will be put in the fature. In the middle of the property is a rocky hill of large extent and a crew of men have been at work with pick and shovel, powder and drill, leveling it. One of these men was Thomas H. Hourhan.

The material resultant after the operations is being used by the L C, R, for ballasting purposes and a track has been run to the works. Down this a working train of flat cars is run and the material is leaded on the cars and then hauled to the place where it can be used for ballasting. Part of the crew of workmen go out with the train to unload the cars. A crew is also kept at the place where the ballasting. Part of the crew of workmen go out with the train to unload the cars. The first word received that anything had gone wrong was by telephone from Forryburn to Station Master Robert Ross at the depot. It was that some of the cars had left the track at about 430 on the return trip and one man had been killed. Mr. Ross made provision for a wrecking train to go out, and also summoned Coroner Berryman. The latter came at once-and he and Mr. Ross went out en the Sussex express, which was just about starting, it being learned that the track would quickly be cleared. When at Coldbrook it was found that the cars had been got on the track again. They were backed down to Coldbrook and the Sussex train went on its way, for the accident had not injured the track. Coroner Berryman and Mr. Ross went back on the working train to the scene of the aad occurrence which was at Lawlor's Lake, a short distance before leaching the over head bridge.

had been got on the track again. They were backed down to Coldbrook and the Snesex train went on its way, for the accident had not injured the track. Gromer Berryman and Mr. Ross went back on the working train to the scene of the aad occurrence which was at Lawlor's Lake, a short distance before teaching the over head bridge.

How it came to happen is not known. It was being pushed by the engine and made only slow time. Seven care passed over the spot all right. Then the next three left the track. The speed being slow and the trouble quickly noted the train was stapped almost before it had continued two car lengths.

The workmen, about a hundred in namber, had been sitting, as is customary with them, with their feet hanging over the slods of the car. Those on the first seven care stayed in their places mainly, and the others jumped. When the train stopped and all ran to the spot where the care had left the rails, there was found the body of Mr Houthan, terribly mangled. Both legs were swen up in the scattered and bruise I remains were covered with a sheet and placed in the van and brought to the city.

At his point the general broke down, and the tears str-amed down has cheeks.

Resuming his testimony, the general is to work in the effort to prove the guilt of Dreyfus. He declared there were traces of treason in every paragraph of the bordereau and that Dreyfus alone, not Esterhasy, coult be acquainted with the plans it contained. He criticised the deposition of Mejor Hartmann, of the 22nd artillery, in regard to the point. The witness thear traversed the old ground, trying to prove that Dreyfus alone was aware of the secrets of the new artillery guns; of the plans for the concentration of troops, and of the contents of the firing mannal. He then endeavored to show Col. Floquart spent 100,000 frances with the object of organizing a campaign of surveillance "of an unfortunate officer who was guilties."

This 100,000 france, he added, was reserve accumulation by Col. Sandherr, by strict economy, from the funds at the disposal of the war office. This reserve had entirely disappeared.

In response to geatures of contradiction from M. Demange, Gen. Roget admitted the figures quoted were perhaps exaggrated.

The witness next accused Col. Picquart of ruppressing documents tending to compromise Dreyfus.

Dreyfus replied: "No, my colonel. It is frightful that; day after day for hours I should thus have my heart, my soul and my very entrail; torn without being permitted to reply. It is a trightful thing; frightful, flightful," This outburst caused a great sensation. Paris, Aug. 17—A special edition of the Figure just issued, exposes another elleged forgery in the Dreyfus matter, by publishing the following telegram from Ems:— "The letter of November 20, 1887, attributed to me, and reproduced in the Figaro of Aug. 16, 1899, is a forgery.

"(Signed) SCHNEIDER,"

The foregoing refers to a letter alleged to have been written by the Austrian military attache at Berlin, declaring Dreyfus had relations with Germany It was mentioned in the testimony of Generals Mercier and Roget.

The publication by the Figaro of the Schneider telegram caused a great sensation here, and tonight the general impression is that Schneider's disavowal has dealt a severe blow to the prosecution, killing the only point in General Mercier's evidence which was dangerous to Dreyfus.

It is expected that the matter will be brought up in court tomorrow by Maitre Demange, who has a splendid opportunity to drive a nail into the coffin of the prosecution.
