AN ORCHID GENTERPIECE.

Richly Embroidered Design For the Dinnes Table.

Richly embroidered centerpieces are naturally for especial occasions, though the centerpiece itself of simple design has become an everyday table decora-tion—that is, dinner or lunch table dec-be if they grew by the acre, and one would, like Thoreau, be ready to take his hat off to every cypripedium, so intensely royal are they. Our design of an orchid centerpiece is rather prodigal, but the appointments of even a simple dinner can hardly be overdone. A dinner is the acme of entertaining, and beautiful things are appropriate to

The leaves of this design form a framework for the blossoms, and both are so managed that, while conventionalized as to arrangement, they do not in the least violate the manner of the natural growth of the plant. They are embroidered in deep yet soft shades of green. The orchids should be worked n purples and gold, always a rich combination. The method of the stitchery is featherstitch, and this work should be slanted toward the stem base of the flowers and kept almost parallel in the leaves. Since to embroider a flower as complicated in form as this requires some skill, an amateur should avail herself of all possible helps. None is more desirable than color studies. If these were obtained and followed more often by the embroiderer, as they are by the decorative painter, we would have better needlework. There are many beautiful orchid studies, as these flowers are favorites in decora-tive art. With one before the embroidery frame the worker can shade correctly as well as follow the lines which indicate texture, as a guide to the proper stitch direction.

Before setting the work on the frame fine buttonhole edge should be embroidered all round the outer outline of the design. The embroidery can afterward be carried down close over this. It is not supposed to show much, merely to fortify the edge so it can be cut out when the work is complete. The work should be done on a round weave linen of good quality. It is no economy to put needlework on inferior materials.—Lilian Barton Wilson in

How to Hold Up a Skirt.

How few women ever attain the faculty of holding up the skirts on rainy days with ease and daintiness! Al though it is the rule to wear flounced underskirts that almost touch the ground, petticoats that reach only to the top of high boots have hitherto been the rule, and on rainy days these are still reverted to. When out walking, the clever woman arranges her skirt, and then, with one hand or per-haps two, she lightly lifts it so that it falls evenly all round. This is where the knack comes in, says a writer in the Louisville Post. To hold up a skirt on one side and let it sweep the ground on the other is very natural, but it is not good taste, and when it falls evenly all round and the frills of the petticoat are almost if not quite visible the effect is dainty in the ex-treme. One of the things that are taught at a school in New York is how to hold up the skirt gracefully.

According to the report forwarded to the minister of education, children who are four years old should sleep twelve hours, children who are seven years old eleven hours, children who are nine years old ten hours, children who are from twelve to fourteen years old from from fourteen to twenty-one years old in children are frequently due to lack

Cozy corners are dear to the feminine heart, but they have been demned as the homes of dust and microbes. Draperies and canopies are to blame for this. These should be discarded. The couch should be placed a little diagonally, with a space behind it. The couch covering should be as rich as one can afford, but with nothing sweeping on the floor, the pictures and bric-a-brac simple and bright, the former of inviting landscapes and flow-ers, with no scarf or drapery across the tops or at the corners to gather dust and distract the attention from who has lived in Welland, Ont., for 30 years, writes: "Some years ago I was attacked with kidney trouble, and I became so run down and emaciated that my entire appearance was suggestive of physical decline. As time went on the complaint grew worse, and became complicated with liver trouble. I had bad pains across the back, and up the spinal column, bad spells with my heart, pain under the right shoulder, bilious headache about half the time, indigestion, fever, and restlessness at night and depression of spirits.

restlessness' at night and depression of spirits.

"At times I was incapacitated for work, and had spent probably one hundred dollars in different medicines, with no perceivable results. Doctors' advice proved likewise of no avail.

"Finally, on the advice of a friend, I began taking Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, and in a short time the bad symptoms began to gradually disappear, and by the time I had used five or six boxes I was enjoying better health than I had in many years, all of which is due to the virtues of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills.

"Since my recovery I have advised others to profit by my experience. Some have done so and are well, while others did not and have succumbed to this dreadful disease. I am a living witness to the value of this great medicine, and I am full of enthusiasm in imparting the good news to others who are afflicted as I was."

LAUNDRY LINES.

All embroideries and colored garments whenever practicable.

To fold table linen when ironing place the selvaged edges together and fold first in half and then over again once. When washing flannels, shake and brush them thoroughly before plunging into the water, as this removes the dirt in a more satisfactory manner and keeps the flannels white.

Soda and ammonia have a tendency to make silk and woolen goods yellov if used in the washing, while borax tends rather to brighten. If clothes are not thoroughly rinsed, the color will always be bad. A housewife with a penchant for the fragrance of orris root is said to place a piece of the root in the bottom of the boiler on wash day. The delicate odor clings to the clothes even when they are dried, ironed and worn.

The Reserved Girl.

dealing with cranks-likes a dash of coldness-shall we call it reserve?-in a girl, something held back, a tantaliz-ing hint of stores of passion reserved, it may be, for future occasions or des tined to be locked within the heart for-ever. Needless to say, I don't mean a disagreeable coldness—no man can en-dure that—or the cruel coldness of the heartless coanette who desires power above everything and would drag her lovers at the wheels of the car of Juggernaut if it would minister to her ambition or her vanity. The coldness which piques a man to greater extremes of loving—which is as vinegar to the salad of life—is far otherwise. Probably-and herein lies its witchery-it is more or less assumed. A role which the bewildering woman chooses to play and which fits her so exquisitely adorns her with such manifold new charms that, so far from regretting it, the enraptured lover feels it is the one crowning touch needed to elevate passion to the realms of the sublime. Cultivate, then, this graceful, desirable habit of coldness, of withholding as well as of Eastern travelers say the reason there are no nervous women in China is because they wear soft shoes. There is no doubt that the hard soled shoes of the western world are the cause of much nerve racking and mental and

After a hard day much relief can be found in the slipping on of a pair of soft soled shoes.

Tired feet and tired nerves will find much comfort in a warm footbath, with a handful of sea salt in it. Paddle about in this till the water cools, dry the feet carefully with a rough towel and don fresh stockings. If one could take time in the middle of the day to change stockings for a fresh pair, it would be easier to keep the feet warm and to ward off rheumatism. Tender feet may be strengthened by bathing and then rubbing them with methylated spirits before retiring for the night, and another excellent plan is to swathe them with a bandage dipped in alum water.

Avoid Small Worries.

Perhaps the secret of the sweet expression and habitual serenity of the Japanese women can be found in their freedom from small worries. The fashion of dress never varying saves he wear of mind on that subject, and the bareness of the houses and simplicity of diet make housekeeping a mere bagatelle. Everything is exqui-sitely clean and easily kept so. There is no paint, no drapery, no crowd of little ornaments, no coming into the houses with the footwear worn in a dusty street. And then the feeling of living in rooms that can be turned into balconies and verandas at a moment's notice, of having walls that slide away and let in all out of doors or change the suits of rooms to the shape and size that the whim of the day or the hour requires!-Pearson's Weekly.

Love and happiness in the home rest more, far more, with the wife than the husband. It may perhaps be urged against this that there are some men whom no woman, be her domestic virtues what they may, could possibly be happy with, but even among such as these the majority would, I am convinced, be found to possess a good as well as a bad side to their characters, and the wife, if she be a wise woman, will set herself to find out that best man to live up to it. Set up an ideal before a man, let him think that to you he is that ideal, and the chances are a
