

The troops were not kept long at Knotty Ash. Transferred to Rhyl after a few weeks, most of them were at home in Canada by April. Demobilized, they will only have to exhibit in civilian life the same qualities of courage, energy and resource, which served them so well at the front, to do much for themselves and for their native land.