

A HAZARDOUS VOYAGE.

The river was full of floating ice, the water turbulent, and the craft a crazy collection of logs and boards. For days the undaunted Bishop and his one companion, an Indian, plied the poles, chafed to the bone but never giving up, until at length an icy barrier formed across the river, and they were compelled to abandon the raft.